AROUND THE RING

By Ed Ricciuti

Heenan, cut it out. We got on your case in the last issue about your claims of being a "broadcast journalist." Glib you are. Stage presence you've got. Camera-wise, you're great. In fact, you've got all of the qualities that many anchor persons have in local and network television talk shows and news reports. That's the rub. Most of them aren't journalists, either. They're talkers and actors, cutesy gabbers who try to make viewers laugh instead of reporting the news. They've got their own views on news stories and haven't enough in the way of journalistic ethics to be objective. They voice opinions based on personal prejudice and ignorance. They make pronouncements on crime in the streets and live in guarded condos. They comment on wars and have never been shot at.

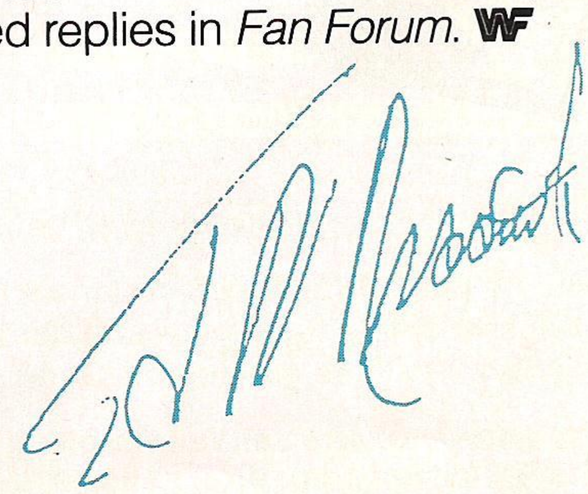

Yes, Bobby, you are a broadcast journalist, the type that is crafted by media experts to look appealing and talk cleverly. But you're not the type of broadcast journalist you claim to be. You don't get into the nitty-gritty. You don't go out after the story at the risk of your own life and limb. Why don't you put your questions to Hulk Hogan and Sid Justice face-to-face, man-on-man? We think you're chicken. Even Howard Finkel puts himself in more precarious positions than you do, Mr. "Broadcast Journalist."

Speaking of Sid Justice, how about that Arkansas farmer? That rawboned, brawny Razorback is making big waves in the WWF. He's a battler, and everyone knows it. Sid is looking and thinking, weighing the alternatives. In a way, he's approaching his WWF career just like a farmer plants his crops. Weather? Unforeseen events. You plot your course carefully. He's doing it.

Has Jake "The Snake" Roberts unleashed the full fury of a Savage onslaught? You bet your bippy. Jake did the unthinkable, threatening Macho Man Randy Savage's new wife Elizabeth with the deadly bite of a cobra. The Snake struck during the Machos' wedding reception during their moment of glory. It was a deed most foul. Now we will wait to see if Jake pays for his crime.

Sgt. Slaughter has a big problem. He's a man without a country. Does he know he has to pay the price? We can't quite figure it out, but we'll watch this former patriot-turned-traitor, who now questions himself, with close scrutiny.

What do you think about Slaughter? Did Adnan lead him down the wrong road? Why did he sell out? What's his future? Let us know, and we'll print selected replies in Fan Forum. WF

In the September issue of this publication, we asked you about the Macho Man and his relationship with his wife, Ms. Elizabeth Macho. We asked you why Elizabeth stayed by her man through thick and thin. The response was overwhelming. Here's what you had to say about the Macho Man and his spouse.

"She [Elizabeth] always brought out the softness and caring in him [Macho Man]. He proved he's loving [and] caring. He treats Elizabeth the way she should be treated: with love and respect." Christi Orlowski, Brookfield, Wisconsin.

"When he was with [Sensational] Sherri, he wasn't the same Savage...The love he has for Elizabeth could always be seen in his eyes." Christina Holden, Warren, Pennsylvania.

"I think one quality that Elizabeth saw in the Macho Man was his joy when he accepted her back after WrestleMania VII." Dave Hogan, West Chicago, Illinois.

"Elizabeth has always been by the side of the Macho Man. She loves him—always has—even through the hard times." James Lyners, Utica, New York.

"I don't know why Elizabeth stayed with Randy Savage. But now that they're together, I think they make a great couple. I guess it's just awfully hard to let go." Dan Wynne, Amherst, Massachusetts.

"I think the reason Miss Elizabeth accepted Randy's proposal is because she realizes that he is a very caring, soft, sensitive man, whom she really loves. I am glad she accepted because they make a really cute couple!" Tabatha Jean Parker, West Portsmouth, Ohio.

"I think that Elizabeth was loyal to Randy Savage for all those years...He has his own kind of macho style that is very easy to like...he's colorful, he's funny and he's macho. He's a Macho Man!" Katy Robbins, Danville, Illinois.

"The reason Elizabeth had the heart to say yes to Macho Man Randy Savage is because he loves her, she loves him, and he's a great man — no matter what," Dustin Hess, Croton-on-Hudson, New York.

"Elizabeth has always stuck by the Macho Man for many reasons. One is that she's a Scorpio, and Scorpios seem to exhibit a lot of loyalty to the people they care about. Another is that she always knew, even when things were really rotten, that the Macho Man cared for her," Michelle Fiore, Woodbridge, Connecticut.

There were, however, some negative responses about Ms. Elizabeth Macho's decision. Although some of the editors were against publishing them, WWF Magazine felt that it wouldn't have been objective reporting. So, here's what a few of you had to say.

"I don't know for the life of me why Elizabeth is back with that Randy Savage. I mean, two years ago he almost harmed her physically after WrestleMania V [in a postmatch interview]. They say that love is blind, and I think Elizabeth is the living proof!" Bert Rutsey, Greenville, South Carolina.

"I think that the Macho Man is too good for Elizabeth. He should've stayed with Sensational Sherri. She's just his type: They're both eccentric, wild and cool. They would've definitely been a Match Made In Heaven...With Elizabeth, it just seems that Savage lacks killer instinct. Look, he hasn't even tried to appeal his lifelong suspension yet. So what does that tell you?" Jesus Rodriguez, Jamaica Heights, New York.

That's all for this month. More next issue. WF

BRAINSTORMS

By Bobby "The Brain" Heenan

There's a lot of big news this month in the WWF, humanoids, so sit back and read, if you happen to be that educated, what your broadcast journalist has to say.

By now, the world must know that I am currently advising the Champ Ric Flair. This man is a champion's champion, and he's willing to prove it against that big yellow bag of hot air, Hulk Hogan. Hey, Hogan, it's time to put up or shut up. The Champ Ric Flair has challenged you for years, pal. You don't have a choice! You must wrestle the Champ Ric Flair. When you do, he'll prove to you and your Hulkamaniacs that you are nothing more than a paper champion, you nitwit!

I'm a man who always tells the truth. I mean, just read my column Brainstorms, and you will see for yourself. If someone did to me what Jake the Snake did to Randy Savage and Ms. Elizabeth Macho, I wouldn't get mad at the guy. I'd cut a deal with him.

Everybody I meet at arenas, hotels or airports always tells me how talented they think the Boss Man is. You people say that the Boss Man looks great in the ring. I say that he looks stupid—in the ring as well as out of it. You people at WWF Magazine also say that I, the WWF's only broadcast journalist, am stupid. I say that all you people are ugly. You see, I can fix being stupid; you can't fix being ugly.

WWF Magazine's editor has been taking cheap shots at me. He questions my credentials as a journalist. The fool is afraid I'm such a good journalist I'll take his job right out from under him. Hey, humanoid, I write for this rag because I enjoy ripping your precious idols apart. But I wouldn't want the editor's job. It's beneath a broadcast journalist. Go stick your pen in your inkwell.

In the September issue of WWF Magazine, there was an interview with the Macho Man Randy Savage. All that he did was go on and on about his impending marriage to Elizabeth [they were happily married at SummerSlam. For complete details turn to our SummerSlam report]. I wanted to rename that article. Instead of calling it WWF Interview, the editors of this rag should've called it "Last Words from a Condemned Man."

That's about all there is for now, humanoids... WF

NEWSBREAKERS

THE GENIUS RETURNS TO THE WWF!

For the last 10 months, the Genius has spent time away from the WWF. According to some, he has dedicated most of his time to learning different theories about fraternal relationships. In order to be enlightened on this subject, he has attended some of the world's most prestigious universities, such as Cambridge, the Sorbonne and Yale.

As soon as he concluded his studies, the Genius decided it was time to return to the WWF. Prior to his re-emergence, the Genius evaluated the field of talent and found a pair of athletes who were in need of his intellectual assistance.

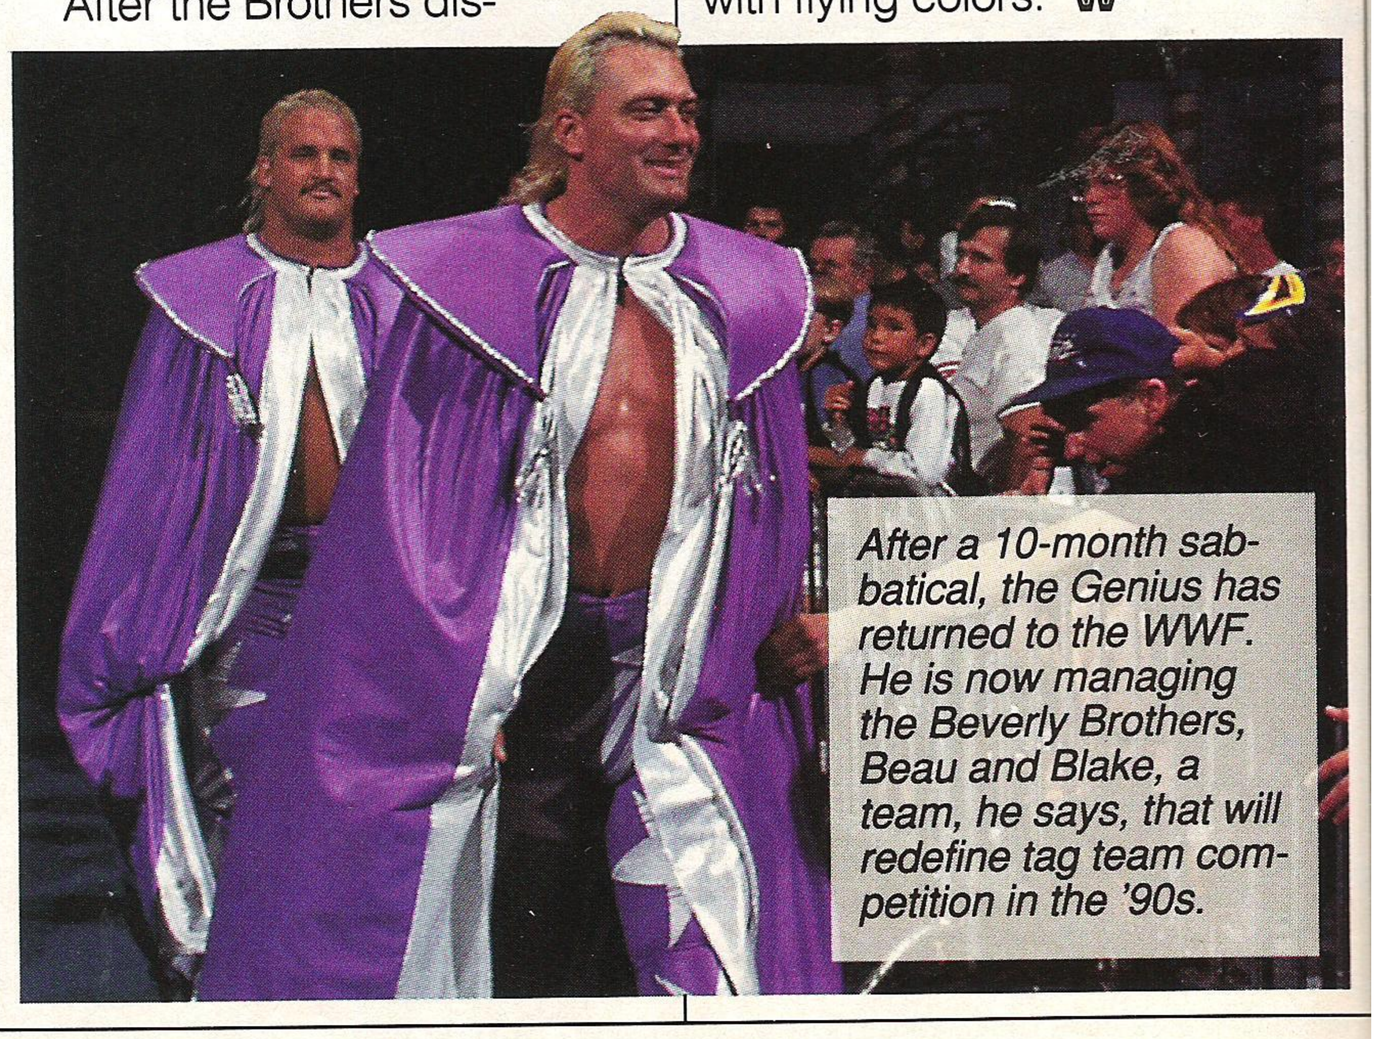

Those wrestlers were the Beverly Brothers, Beau and Blake, two highly pampered individuals who always had everything handed to them on a silver platter. In many ways, Beau and Blake are much like the Genius, so in mid-September he decided to put his knowledge of fraternal relations to work. He worked out an agreement with the Brothers and is now managing them.

Since the scholarly manager announced his new position, success has followed the Genius' tag team. Just seconds before one of the Brothers' matches on WWF Superstars of Wrestling, for example, the Genius grabbed the microphone and recited the following poem:

Behold the Brothers Beverly,
The best at any price,
Combined with the Genius
And my masterful advice.
They're really quite remarkable
And classically elite.
Combined with the Genius—
They're impossible to beat.

After the Brothers dismantled their opponents, their new manager had this to say to WWF Magazine. "For close to 12 moons, I, the Genius, have delved into the subject of fraternal relationships," the Genius said. "I've learned why some relationships succeed and others fail. Well, the Brothers, under my guidance, will never fail. We will ascend to the very pinnacle of the WWF's tag team division in record time. And we will do it with our intellect and with our sinews."

That may be the case. However, the Bushwhackers, Luke and Butch, aren't so certain that the Genius and his boys will pass the test when Beau and Blake meet them in the squared circle. Sure, the Brothers may have a man who is perhaps the most educated person in the world managing them, but, say the Bushwhackers, "we went to the school of hard knocks, and," they add, "we passed with flying colors." WF

After a 10-month sabbatical, the Genius has returned to the WWF. He is now managing the Beverly Brothers, Beau and Blake, a team, he says, that will redefine tag team competition in the '90s.

NEW SHIP, NEW CREW, NEW ADVENTURES

WF PERSONALITY PROFILE

Cigar-chomping Big Bully Busick and his longtime pal and current manager, Harvey Wippleman, say that they are here to serve notice and abuse on every superstar currently in the World Wrestling Federation.

As kids growing up in West Virginia, Big Bully Busick and scrawny Harvey Wippleman were always asserting their power over others. For example, while they were in grade school, little Harvey would confront other kids on the playground and demand that they give him their lunch money. When they refused to do so, he would call for the Big Bully.

Upon hearing his name mentioned, the Bully usually raced to the trouble spot and backed up his accomplice. With the Bully behind him, Wippleman would exude his bravado. He would grab the youngsters by the scruff of their necks and force them to relinquish their pocket change. Then, when they handed over the loot, Harvey and his Bully would walk off the playground, ditch the rest of their classes

the high school football tear

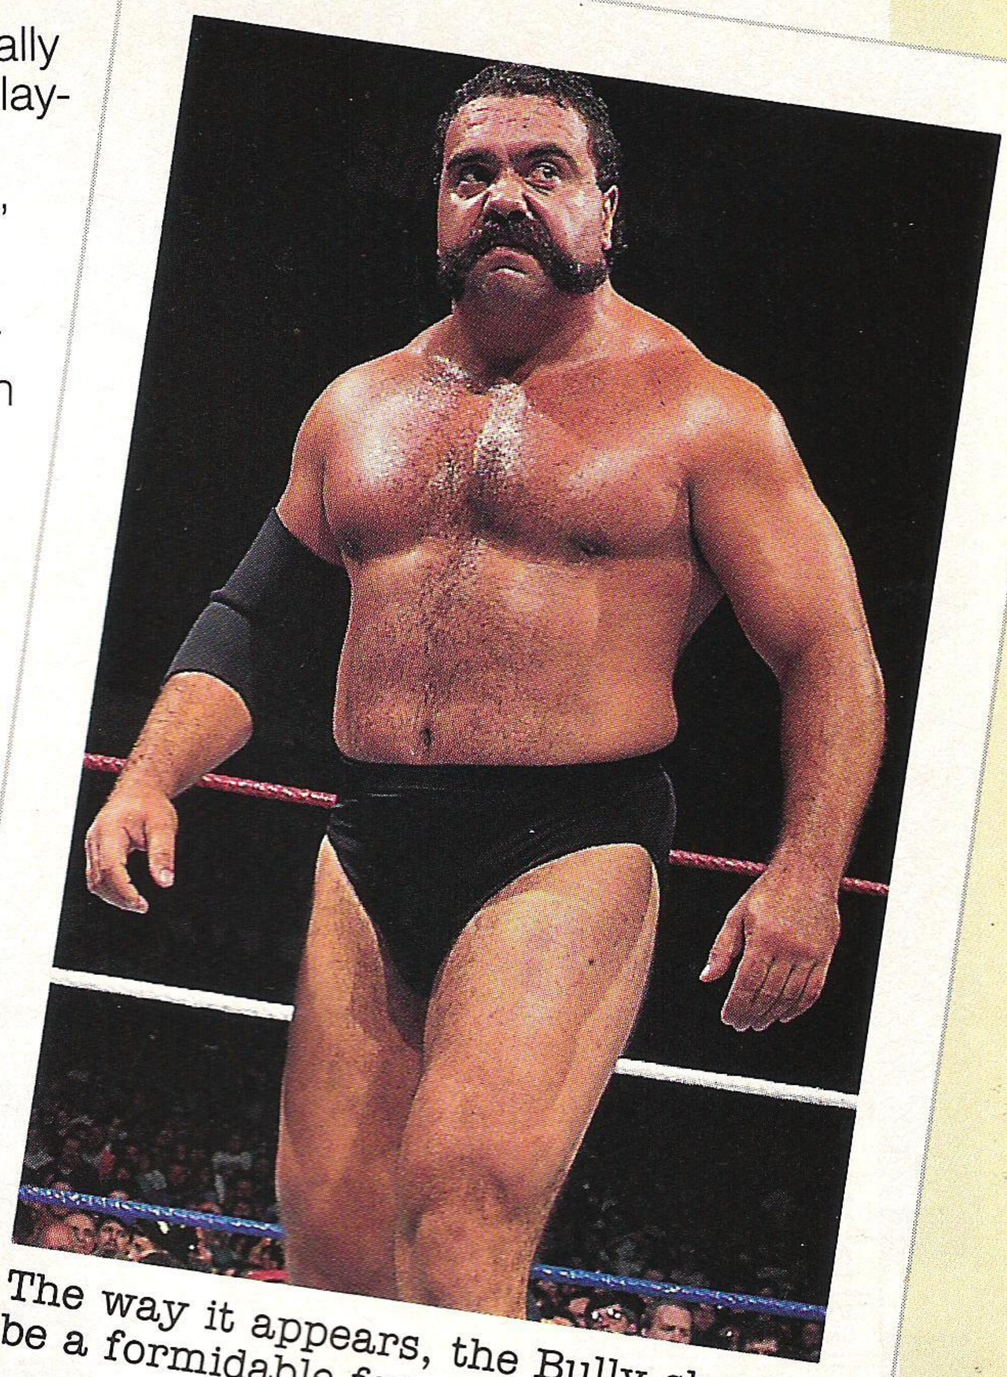

"It was the night before a big game," recalls our source. "All the football guys were hanging out in the parking lot of this local diner. They were all psyched up about the game because their opponents—a real tough squad from Wheeling—were undefeated for about six years back then.

"Well, anyway," our source goes on, "skinny Harvey walked by and began to bad-mouth the players. He then challenged them all to a fight. One of the guards, who stood well over six feet and weighed 255 pounds on a light day, grabbed Harvey, cocked his fist and prepared to blast him into next week! Just then, Harvey yelled for the Bully. From behind a dumpster, he came out, chewing the end of his cigar and looking really mean. As soon as the player saw the Bully, he released his grip. By then, though, it was too late. The Bully had already knocked out three other guys and was zeroing in on the guard. That was it. The Bully beat the daylights out of those guys so badly that they had to forfeit the game the next day because of injuries."

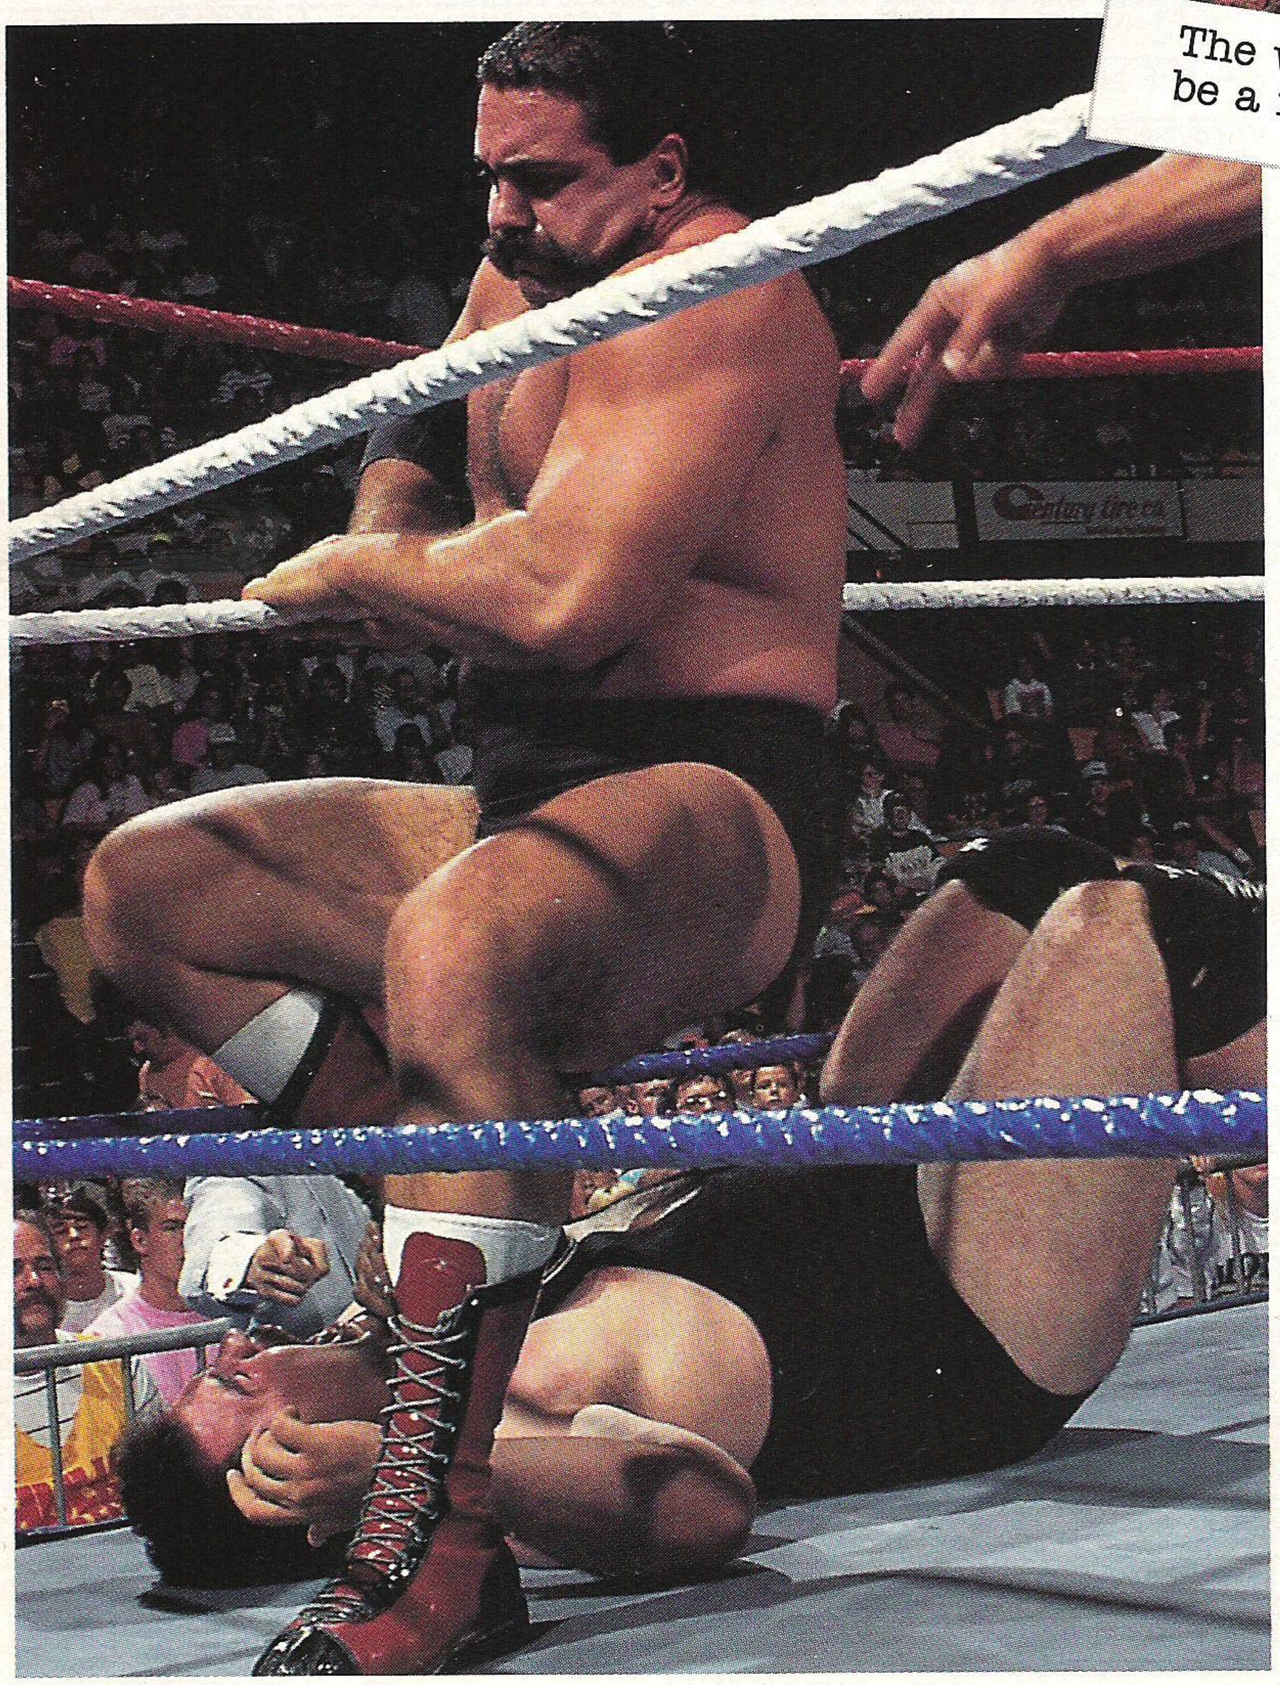

Since the Bully and Harvey entered the WWF, they have been repeating the routine of their youth. Harvey, chomping on his cigar, challenges wrestlers to fight. When someone takes him up on his threat, however, Wippleman, as he has done time and again, calls for the Bully. He rushes onto the scene and does the manager's dirty work.

"I'm Harvey Wippleman, and I'm here to tell everyone in the WWF that my Bully and I are gonna beat everybody up!" the manager says with an ear-to-ear smirk. "We're putting everybody on notice—and that means everybody. Guys like Hulk Hogan, the Warrior, Sid Justice and Texas Tornado had all better look out. Nobody's gonna stop me and my Bully!"

Thus far, nobody has. However, every bully eventually meets somebody who is a little bigger, a little stronger and a little tougher than he is. The WWF, if he hasn't noticed, is chock-full of those athletes, and it could be just a matter of time before one of them confronts Big Bully Busick and Harvey Wippleman in the ring. WF

The way it appears, the Bully should be a formidable force in the WWF.

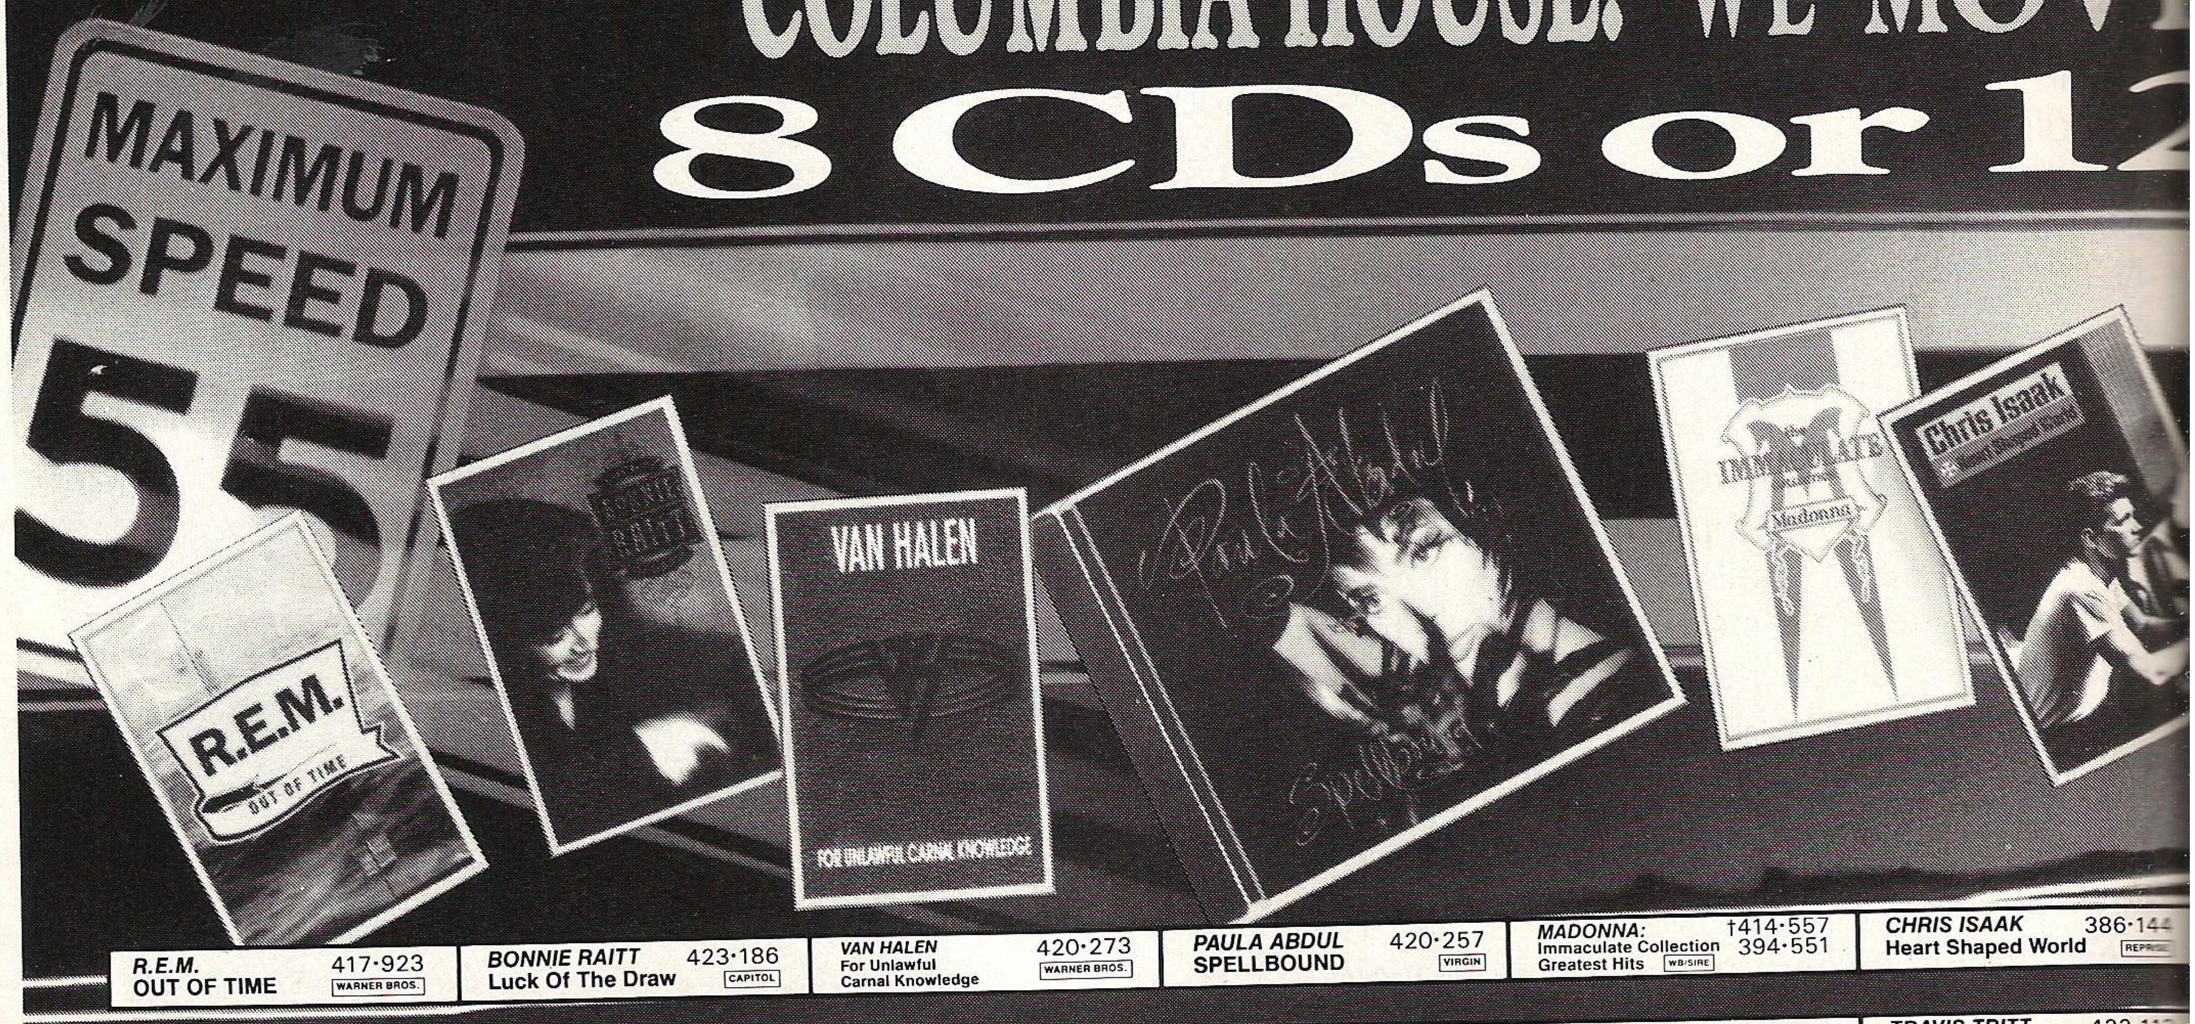

In one of his first matches this past summer, the Big Bully put the boots to newcomer Mario Mancini.

A Talk With: Big Boss Man

WWF INTERVIEW

Last month in WWF Magazine, IRS, who's also known as Irwin R. Schyster, was the subject of our interview. During that discussion, the snide tax man let it be known that he is preparing to audit the Big Boss Man in the very near future. Schyster's contacts in the nation's capital, so he says, told him that the Boss Man has been lying on his tax returns. They allegedly told IRS many things about the Boss Man. They told IRS that the former corrections officer has been receiving kickbacks and payoffs for years. Mr. Schyster, in turn, told the world that the Boss Man is a cheat.

When the Boss Man caught wind of Mr. Schyster's comments, he wrote a rebuttal in the Viewpoint section of last month's edition. However, when it comes to IRS, the Boss Man is never at a loss for words. With that in mind, WWF Magazine presents this exclusive conversation with the Big Boss Man.

WWF: Boss Man, as you are well aware, Irwin R. Schyster has been saying that you are a tax cheat. He's been saying that you've been evading your taxes. For the record, Boss Man, are any of these accusations true?

Boss Man: True? There ain't ever been a true word that came from IRS' mouth! He's going around telling everybody that I'm accepting kickbacks. He's telling everybody that the Big Boss Man's been skimming off the top. He's telling everybody that he wants to conduct an audit on my taxes! Well, punk, if you want the Big Boss Man, you know where to find him. I'll be waiting in my courtroom. Most people like to call it the ring. And when I get my hands on you, boy, you'll realize that you should've never broken the law.

WWF: What law has he broken? IRS is just saying what's on his mind when he comments about your tax situation. Is doing that considered to be against the law?

Boss Man: No, but saying things that ain't true is! IRS is wrong—the boy's dead wrong! You see, and I pointed this out in last month's Viewpoint, IRS is a criminal. He has broken the law. He has defamed my character, and defamation of character, if my mind still serves me, is a crime punishable by hard time in prison. That's right, boy, real hard time. I can just see it right now: IRS sitting in that six-by-eight cell, watching cracks form in the walls and roaches crawl on the floor. I can see you, IRS, all clean-shaven, with that necktie and nice shirt. And I can see the other inmates in that cell looking at you, looking at you like you're dead meat. Do you guys get the drift of what I mean?

WWF: Yes, we think we get the point. We'll move on with this interview. Boss Man, when WWF Magazine decided to interview you, the news somehow leaked onto the streets. IRS, being the manipulating person that he is, quickly discovered this information and, via his offices in Washington, DC, sent this publication a memorandum. It said in part that he is, and we quote,"...considering conducting an audit of Boss Man's mother's taxes on a date to be determined." Your thoughts, please.

Boss Man: You know, some people just don't know when they've stepped over the line. IRS, you wanna investigate me, then be my guest, boy. But don't bring my mama into it! My mama never had a job in her life. All she did was take care of her children and raise food on the farm down in Georgia. She ain't gotta pay no taxes on nothing! I'm warning you, punk! Just keep her out of it, if you know what's good for you!

WWF: He said in his memo that he's only considering an investigation of your mother's tax returns. However, if he follows through, then how will you respond?

Boss Man: The bottom line is this: I'm issuing an all-points bulletin for IRS' hide. If he messes with my mama, he'll be wanted dead or alive. I will hunt him down. I will clamp these handcuffs on his wrists. I will place him under arrest, and I will throw him so far down in the hole that he'll have to have air pumped to him! IRS, if you bring my mama into this, then that will be the hardest day of your life, boy! So, just shut your mouth and sit back and count the pencils and the paper clips in your briefcase. Because the next time you open your mouth about my mama, then the only things that you'll be counting will be the days until your release from prison. And we all know you can't even count that high.

WWF: Now when you battle IRS in the ring, Boss Man, you'll have to be wary of many factors. We're sure you're aware that he's a devious athlete who does anything in his power to attain victory. However, you must know that he's also a well-polished wrestler who is capable of trading holds with the best technicians in the business. How will you avoid being trapped in his finishing maneuver, the Write-off?

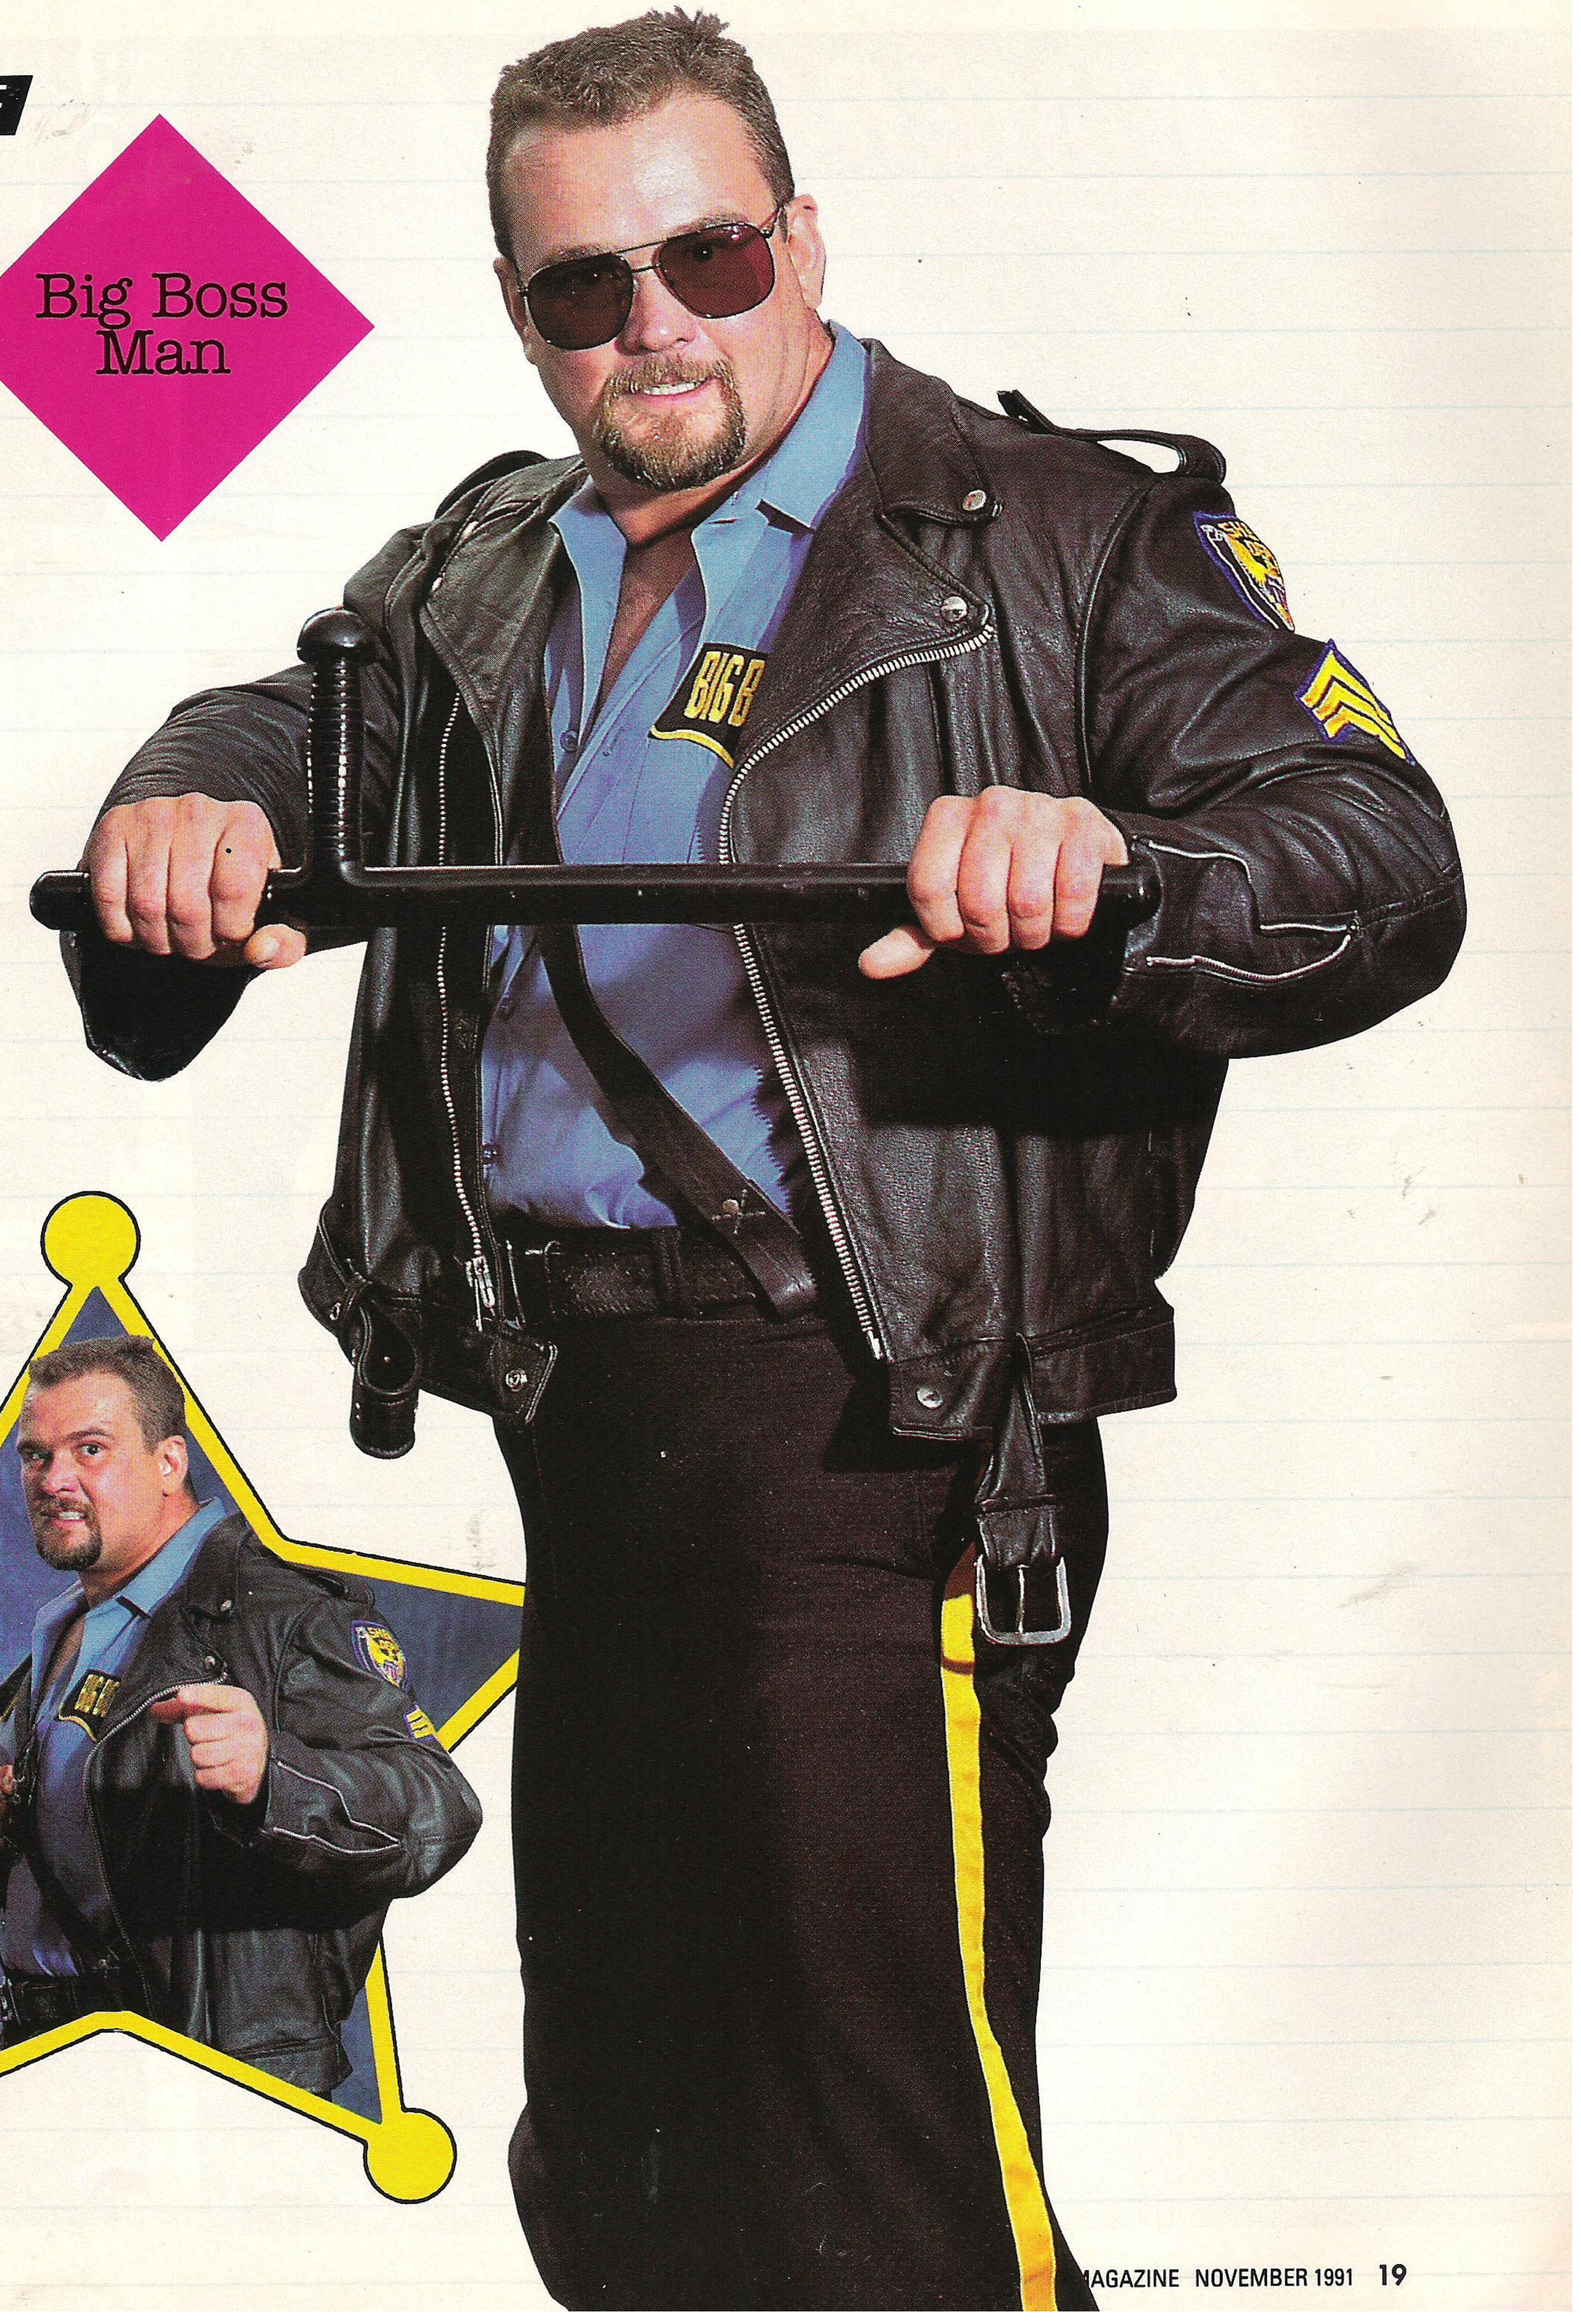

Boss Man: The boy won't ever get the chance to use that maneuver of his because the very first minute I get my hands on IRS, I ain't gonna stop beating him until I hear the bell ring. And I want you to know that I'm coming at you full-bore, IRS. I ain't gonna give you even one second to breathe. Let me tell you this, IRS: You can try to pull all the punches you want, but nothing's gonna work. Take this as a warning—you are gonna serve hard time, and there's no way that you can get around it, punk!

WWF: Thank you for the interview, Boss Man. WF

BATTLE OF THE TITANS

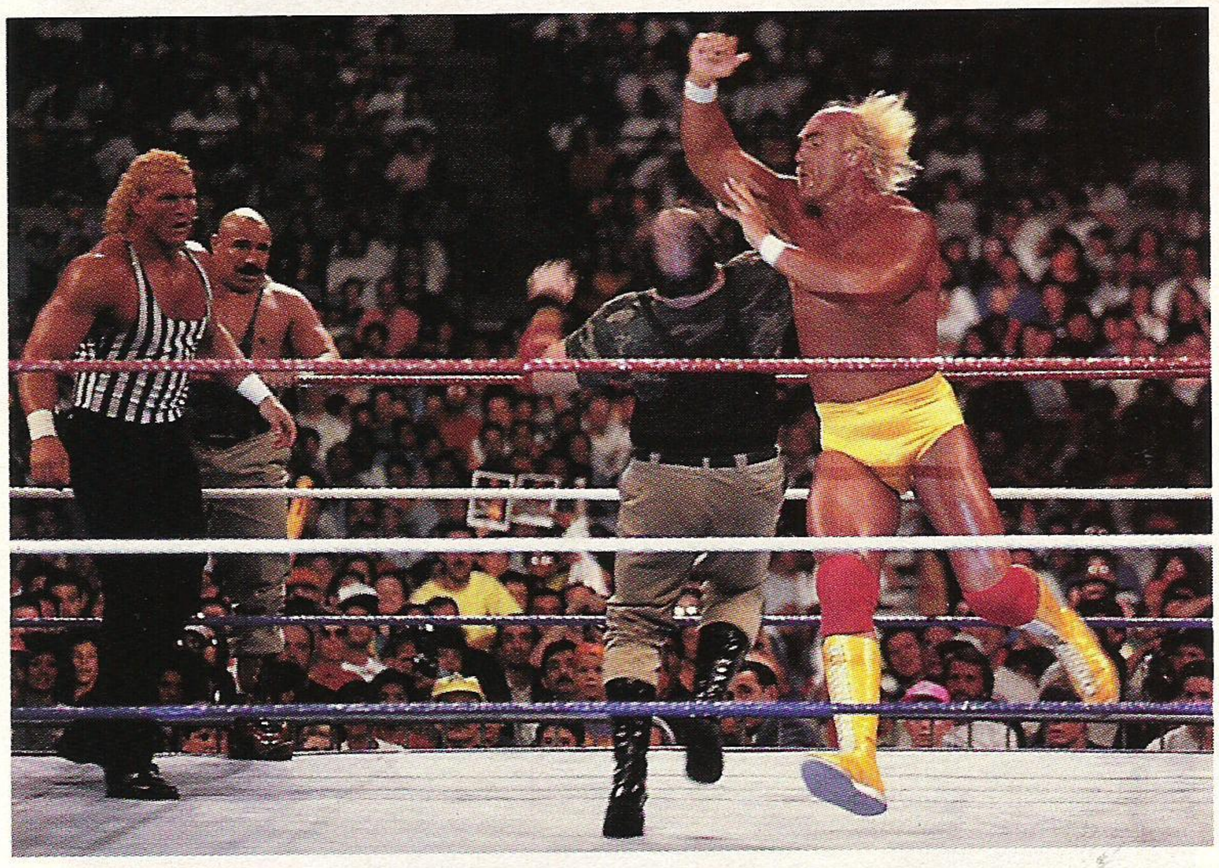

A MATCH MADE IN HELL

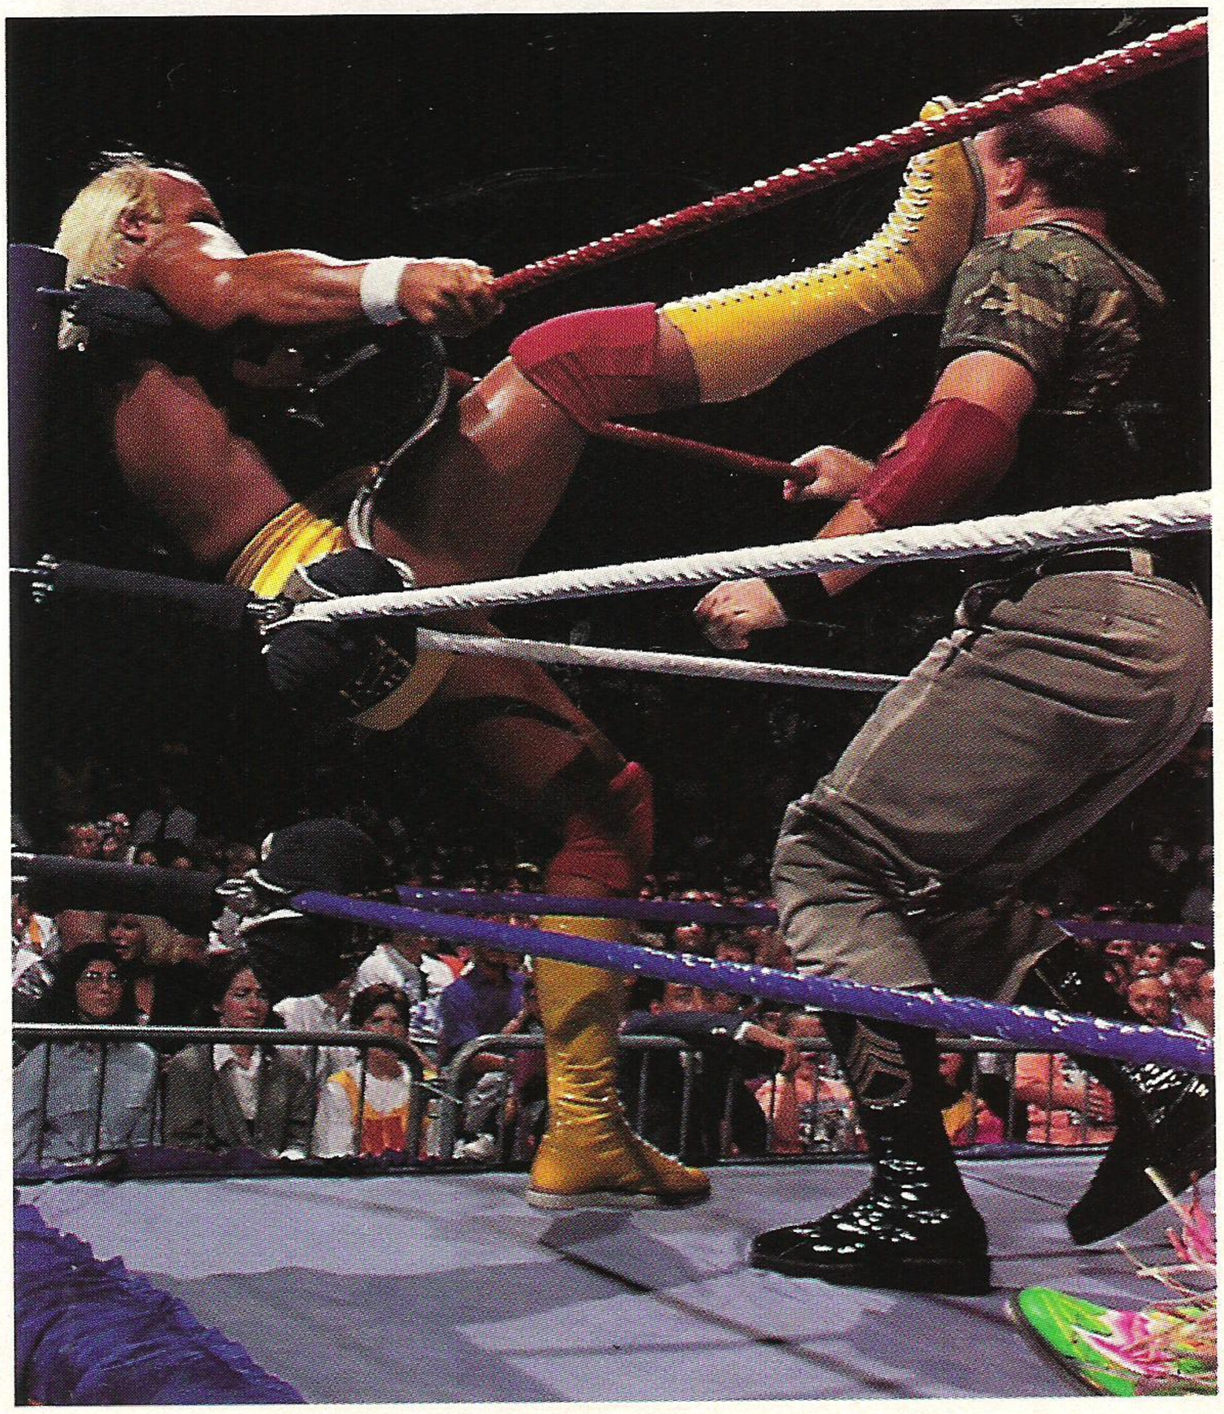

By Lou Gianfriddo

SummerSlam's Match Made in Hell, the bout that pitted Sgt. Slaughter, Colonel Mustafa and General Adnan against Hulk Hogan and the Ultimate Warrior, turned out to be just that. From the moment these teams entered the ring, special referee Sid Justice had his hands full. He had to maintain control and call it down the middle just as he had promised for weeks and days leading up to the summertime wrestling spectacular.

The Hulkster and Sarge elected to begin the match for their respective teams. Perhaps thinking that he could get away with chicanery, Sarge undid his belt and took several swipes at Hogan's head. However, Sid intervened and prevented Slaughter from doing any harm. Several moments later, the combatants circled one another and locked horns. Sarge backed the Hulkster into a corner and unloaded with heavy artillery. He laced into the champion wit big punches and forearms to the pectorals.

Sarge's tactics then took a turn for the worse when th
Hulkster reversed an Irish whip and scored with a blisterin punch. Slaughter staggered backward. However, he sta gered close to the Warrior, and he, too, blasted Sarge with stinging blow to the cranium. Perhaps noticing the Warrio battle lust, the champion tagged the muscleman, who, w
Hogan, floored Slaughter with a double clothesline and a d ble boot to the chest.

As the match resumed, Hogan once again got back into ring and rammed Slaughter's head on top of the ringpost.

who rushed to his fallen comrade's aid and stomped on Hulkster's back. After Justice cleared Mustafa from the Hogan and his partner took turns brutalizing Slaughter w bevy of hard-hitting tactics. At one point, Hogan, engulf rage, backed Slaughter into a corner and gave him a tas his own medicine in the form of a blatant choke.

Justice, though, would have none of that. He assert power and ordered the Hulkster to break the hold o disqualification. Just when the champion broke free, S ter reached out and tagged the Hulkster's throat with erful punch, before tagging Adnan.

clutch. Just when it looked as if the Hulkster was ready to succumb to the painful move, the Ultimate Warrior raced into battle and booted Mustafa's back. While Justice was reprimanding the Warrior for his unsportsmanlike action, the Sarge entered the ring illegally and damaged Hogan's back with a fierce backbreaker.

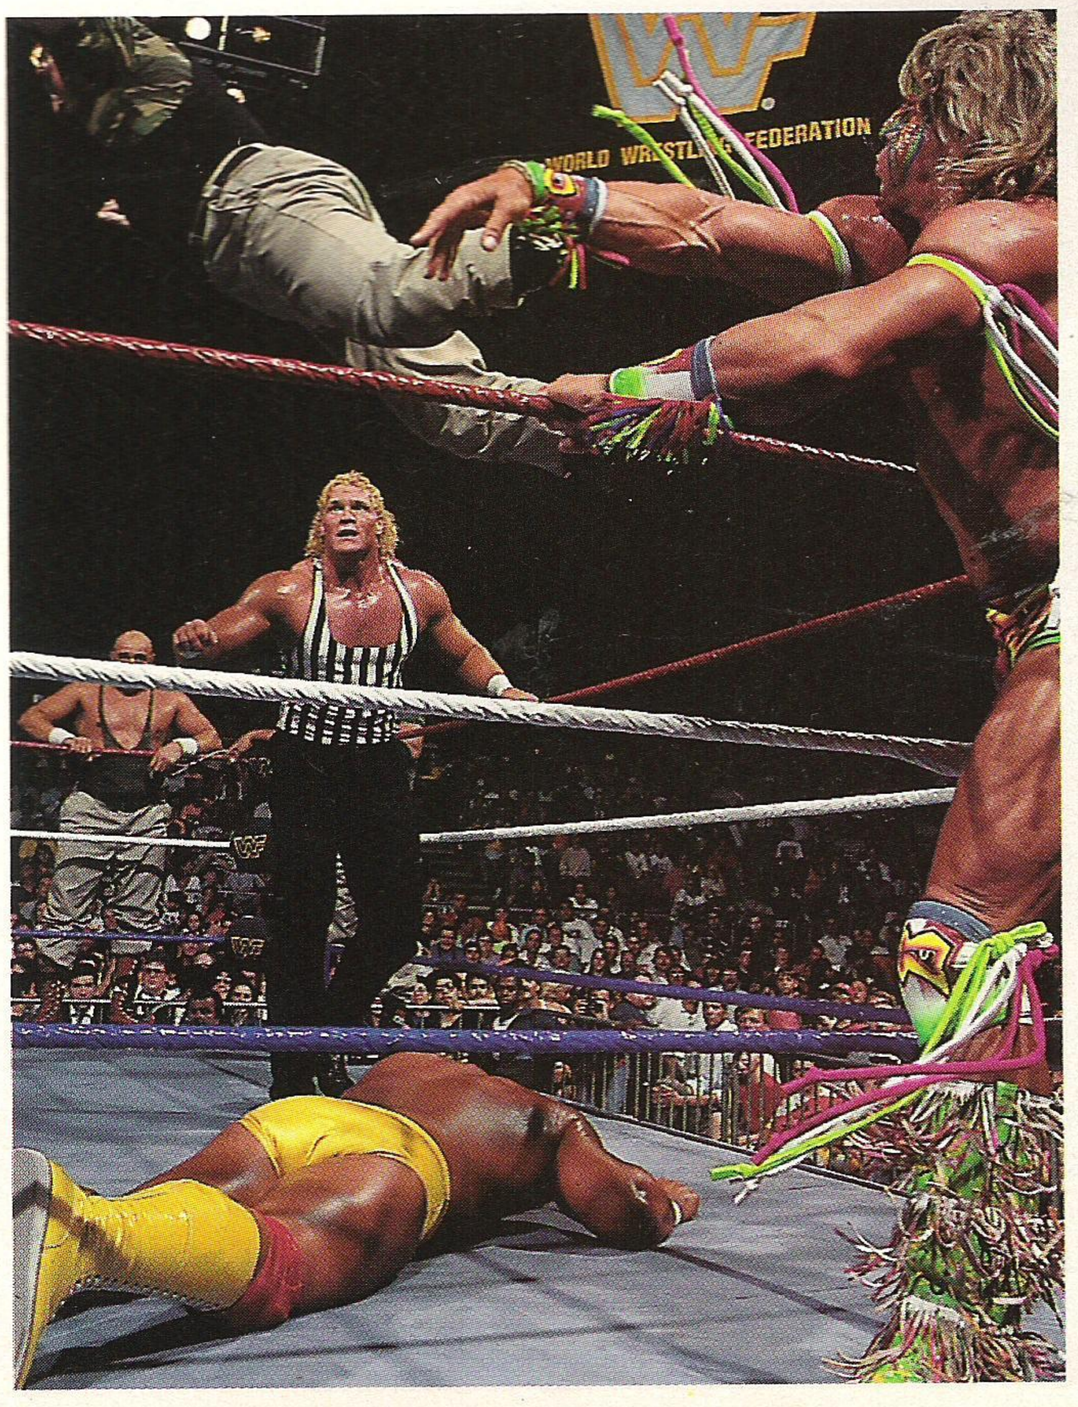

The Triangle of Terror wouldn't relent. Sarge scored with kicks to the Hulkster's midsection. Adnan bit and raked Hogan's face. Mustafa did all he could to distract Justice's attention. As a result of the bombardment, the Hulkster fell to the canvas in a heap. Seeing him down, Slaughter mounted the top turnbuckle in order to drive a knee into his victim's badly damaged lower back. However, before the cashiered drill instructor was able to take flight, the Warrior, from the ring apron, shoved Slaughter to the canvas. This gave the Hulkster ample time to recover. He crawled to his corner and tagged a pumped-up Ultimate Warrior.

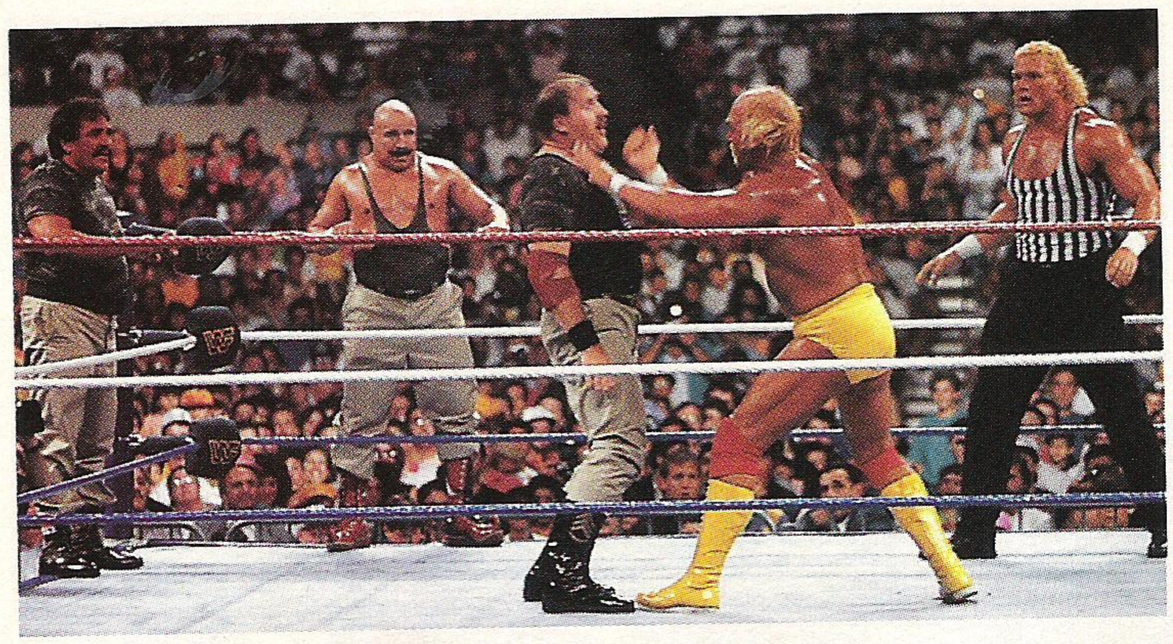

Calling on his gods for power, the Warrior bounded off the ropes and cut down Sarge with a big clothesline. He went for another clothesline. This time, though, he collided with Justice. Any other referee would have been rendered unconscious, but Sid, all 288 pounds of him, absorbed the blow and looked the Warrior dead in the eye.

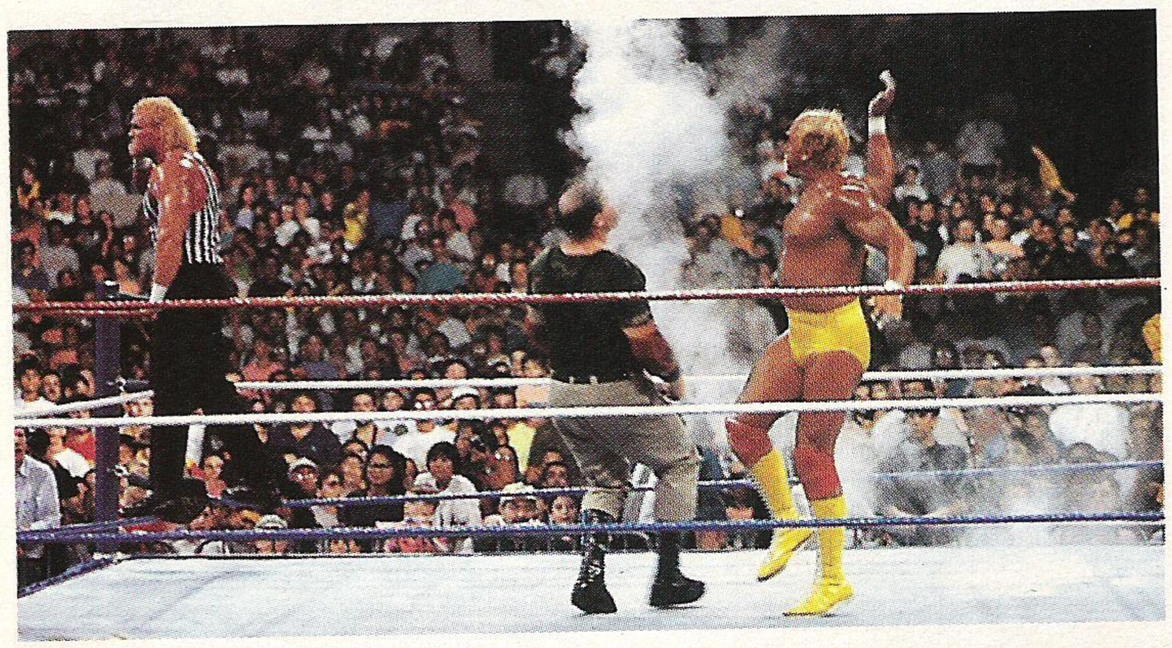

Unfortunately for the Warrior, this was a serious distraction, because Slaughter rose to his feet and dropped his foe with a kick to the lower lumbar region. After ramming the Warrior's skull into the buckles, Slaughter tagged Adnan, who hammered the former WWF Champion with chops and scratches before tagging in his brother-in-arms, Colonel Mustafa. The Warrior reversed one of Mustafa's suplexes but remained under fire as Slaughter came into the ring to choke him while General Adnan went to work on his fine sculpted abdominals.

The war then took another turn, as all wars seem to when the Warrior fired off the ropes and nailed Sarge with clothesline. The force of the blow was so great that both m hit the canvas in a motionless heap. Sid Justice stood o the fallen wrestlers and began to put the count on them. the count of eight, the Ultimate Warrior regained his sen and made the all-important tag.

The Hulkster was a house afire. Roaring like a lion, WWF Champion hammered Sarge with punches and drop him with a big kick to the face. After Hogan slugged Ad Mustafa ran into the ring and attempted to besiege the H ster. It didn't work. The Warrior met him in mid-ring blasted him with a series of blows before chasing him to the locker room with a chair. Amidst all the chaos, Hulkster reached into his trunks and blinded Slaughter wi smoke screen of powder. It was Hulk's "victory powder," tribution for Slaughter's burning his face with fire mo before. Sarge fell to the canvas, and seconds later the H ster ended the war when he dropped the big one on Sarg the big legdrop, that is. That was it. Justice turned ar and made the three-count.

After the match, Adnan and Mustafa were overheard locker room talking about Slaughter. They said that Sla ter's weaknesses cost them the Match Made in Hell. W more, Mustafa and Adnan also scoffed at Slaughter, sayi should retire from the WWF.

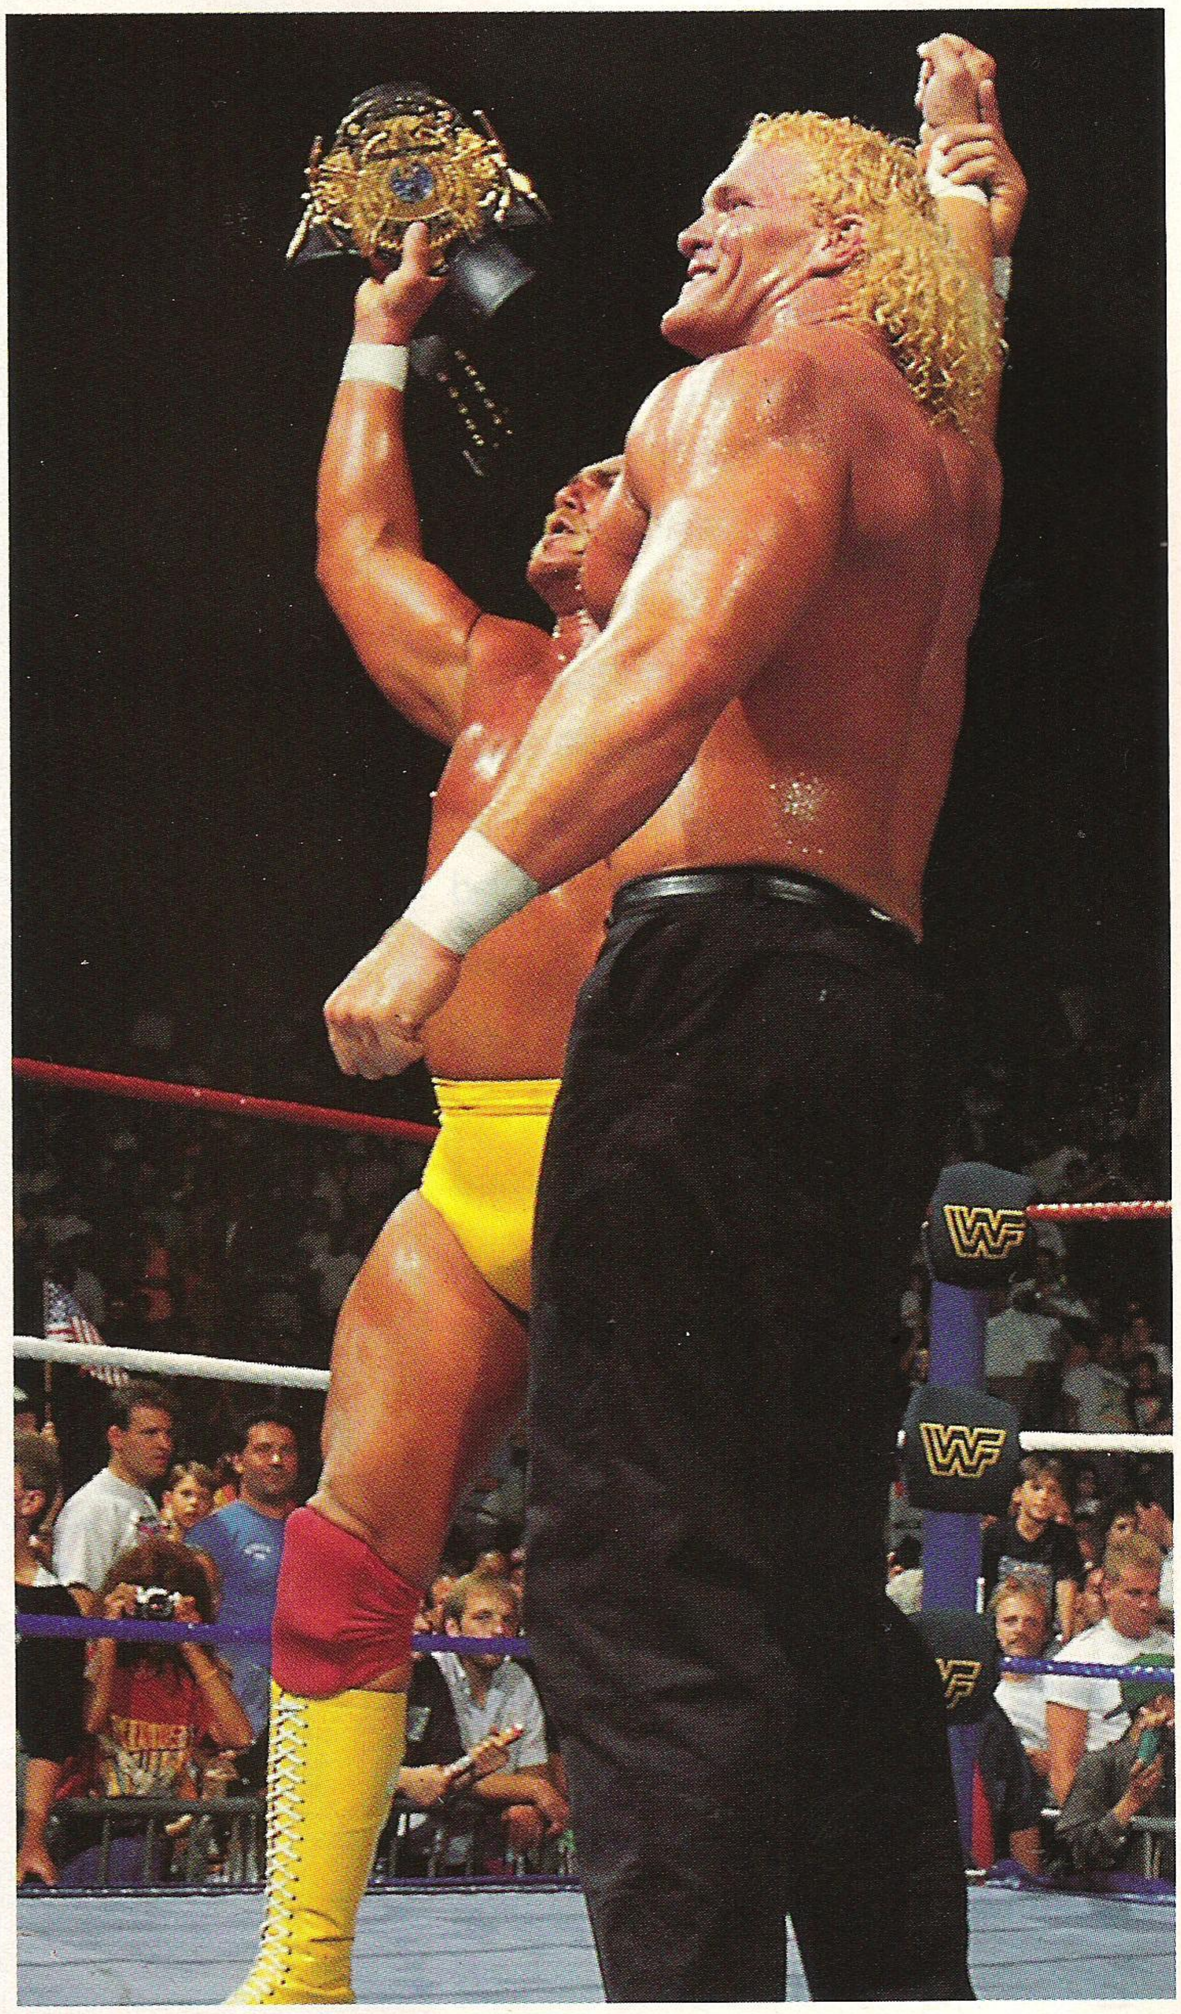

When Slaughter returned to the dressing room, he ered his gear and left the arena. As of press time, thi dier's whereabouts are unknown.

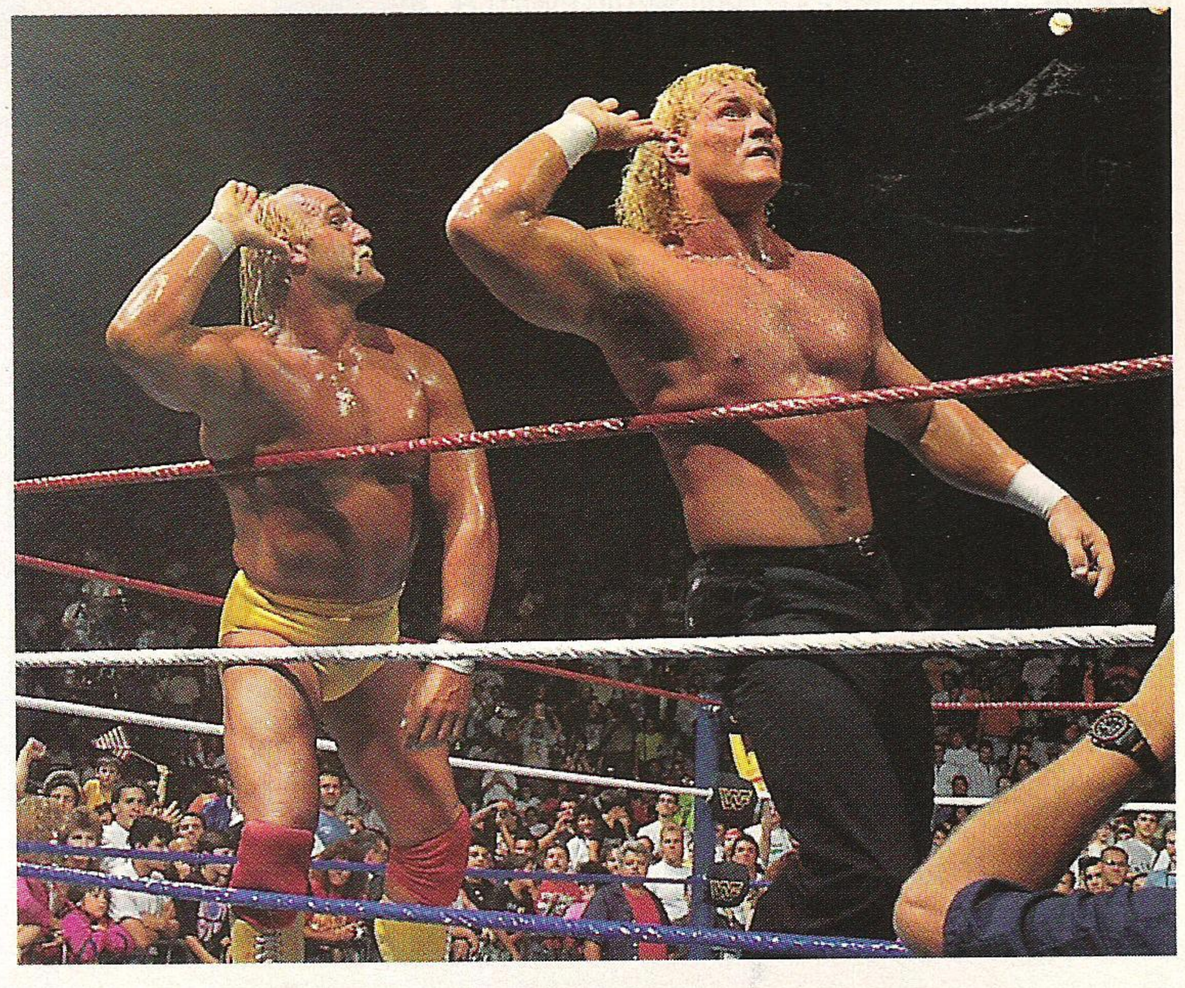

Scoffing was also directed at the Hulkster, but it did not emanate from Madison Square Garden. It originated from Charlotte, North Carolina, several days after SummerSlam. The words came from the lips of "The Champ" Ric Flair.

"Hogan, you thought the Match Made in Hell was bad; well, pal, you don't have the faintest idea in the world of what hell is until you wrestle Ric Flair," Flair said. "SummerSlam is over. Now what I'm waiting for is the the chance to get you in the ring and show you who's the real champion. Remember, Hogan, diamonds are forever. Slic Ric is forever. Hulkamania is only temporary. Whooo!"

Bobby Heenan, who was calling some of the action at SummerSlam, agrees. Heenan walked back to the locker room with Flair's championship belt and, speaking through Hogan's closed dressing room door, challenged him on Flair's behalf to a title match in the near future. As the world saw on pay-per-view, the Hulkster answered Bobby the Brain by pounding ferociously on the inside of the door. Frightened, the Brain adjusted his bolo tie, screamed at the camera crew and walked off. After the event, the Brain had these exclusive comments for WWF Magazine.

"Well, Hogan, you didn't want to talk to me about the real world's champion Ric Flair when I came to your dressing room during SummerSlam, did you?" Heenan asked. "Now I'm gonna give it to you in writing, dummy. Ric Flair wants one thing from you, and that's the WWF Championship. And it's only fitting that the real world's champion Ric Flair should hold another title. Hogan, you might have ended one war at SummerSlam. But, humanoid, another war awaits you, a war with the real world's champion Ric Flair! Whooo! I love the way that rolls off my tongue." WF

Bret "Hit Man" Hart became the first Canadian in WWF history to win the Intercontinental Title. He defeated former two-time titlist Mr. Perfect in this classic wrestling match. Bret scored the win when he blocked a Perfect legdrop and transformed it into the Sharpshooter.

One of the most intense SummerSlam confrontations pitted tag team titlists the Nasty Boys, Knobbs and Sags, against formidable challengers the Legion of Doom, Hawk and Animal. These squads had met before, forgetting about the rules as they lost themselves in brutal free-for-alls. Thus, the WWF sanctioned this match as a no-disqualification, no-count-out contest. In other words, the battle could not end without a clear-cut winner.

Realizing that the stipulations allowed unrestrained brawling, all four men came to the ring determined to tear each other apart. At the start of the match, the Legion of Doom seemed more intent on accomplishing this end than their foes, and for good reason: The challengers, Hawk and Animal, hoped to get an early lead and plow their way to the coveted title. For a moment it appeared that the Nastys wished they had never left Allentown, Pennsylvania. Hawk tossed Sags from the ring and followed him onto the arena floor to mete out the LOD's distinctive form of punishment while Animal was putting the kibosh on Knobbs inside the ring, nailing him with a modified version of the powerbomb.

The rules—or, rather, lack of them—permitted the champs to take the fight back outside the ropes. Sags and Knobbs smashed Hawk's head into the steel ring stairs and then bombarded him with vicious double axhandles delivered from the ring apron.

Soon Hawk was well enough to engage in a four-way brawl, which the Nasty's manager, Jimmy Hart, hoped to shift in his team's favor by inserting his controversial motorcycle helmet. It didn't work. Hawk grabbed the object, whacked Knobbs with it and cracked Sags for good measure. Next came the LOD's dreaded Doomsday Device: Hawk plummeted onto Sags from the top rope, and Animal pinned the victim to capture the WWF Tag Team Championship!

In another upset, Virgil finally got even with his former boss, the Million Dollar Man Ted DiBiase, by snagging his Million Dollar Belt.

Despite DiBiase's claims of confidence before the match, he relied heavily on the interfering tactics implemented by his manager, Sensational Sherri—so much so that referee Earl Hebner ordered her to be ousted from ringside midway through the match.

Hebner thought his troubles were over, but they were only beginning! As the combatants struggled in center ring, DiBiase reversed an Irish whip, slinging his foe right into the official, rendering him unconscious.

Capitalizing on the situation, DiBiase pulled out all the stops: suplexing, bodyslamming, fistdropping and elbowing Virgil. He even covered him for the pin at one stage, but the referee was too incoherent to see it.

After DiBiase removed the turnbuckle cushion to slam his opponent's head into the bolt underneath, Virgil managed to put on the brakes and ram his former employer's skull instead. But Virgil was exhausted, and both men fell unconscious onto the mat. Virgil woke up first and crawled over to DiBiase, lying on top of him as the referee—now revived—registered the three-count.

Summer Slam

Earlier on, Bret "Hit Man" Hart realized the goal he set for himself when he became a singles wrestler. Using his vast ring knowledge and technical expertise—while refusing to be intimidated by his opponent's toughness and reputation—Hart delighted the pay-per-view audience by taking the WWF Intercontinental Title from Mr. Perfect.

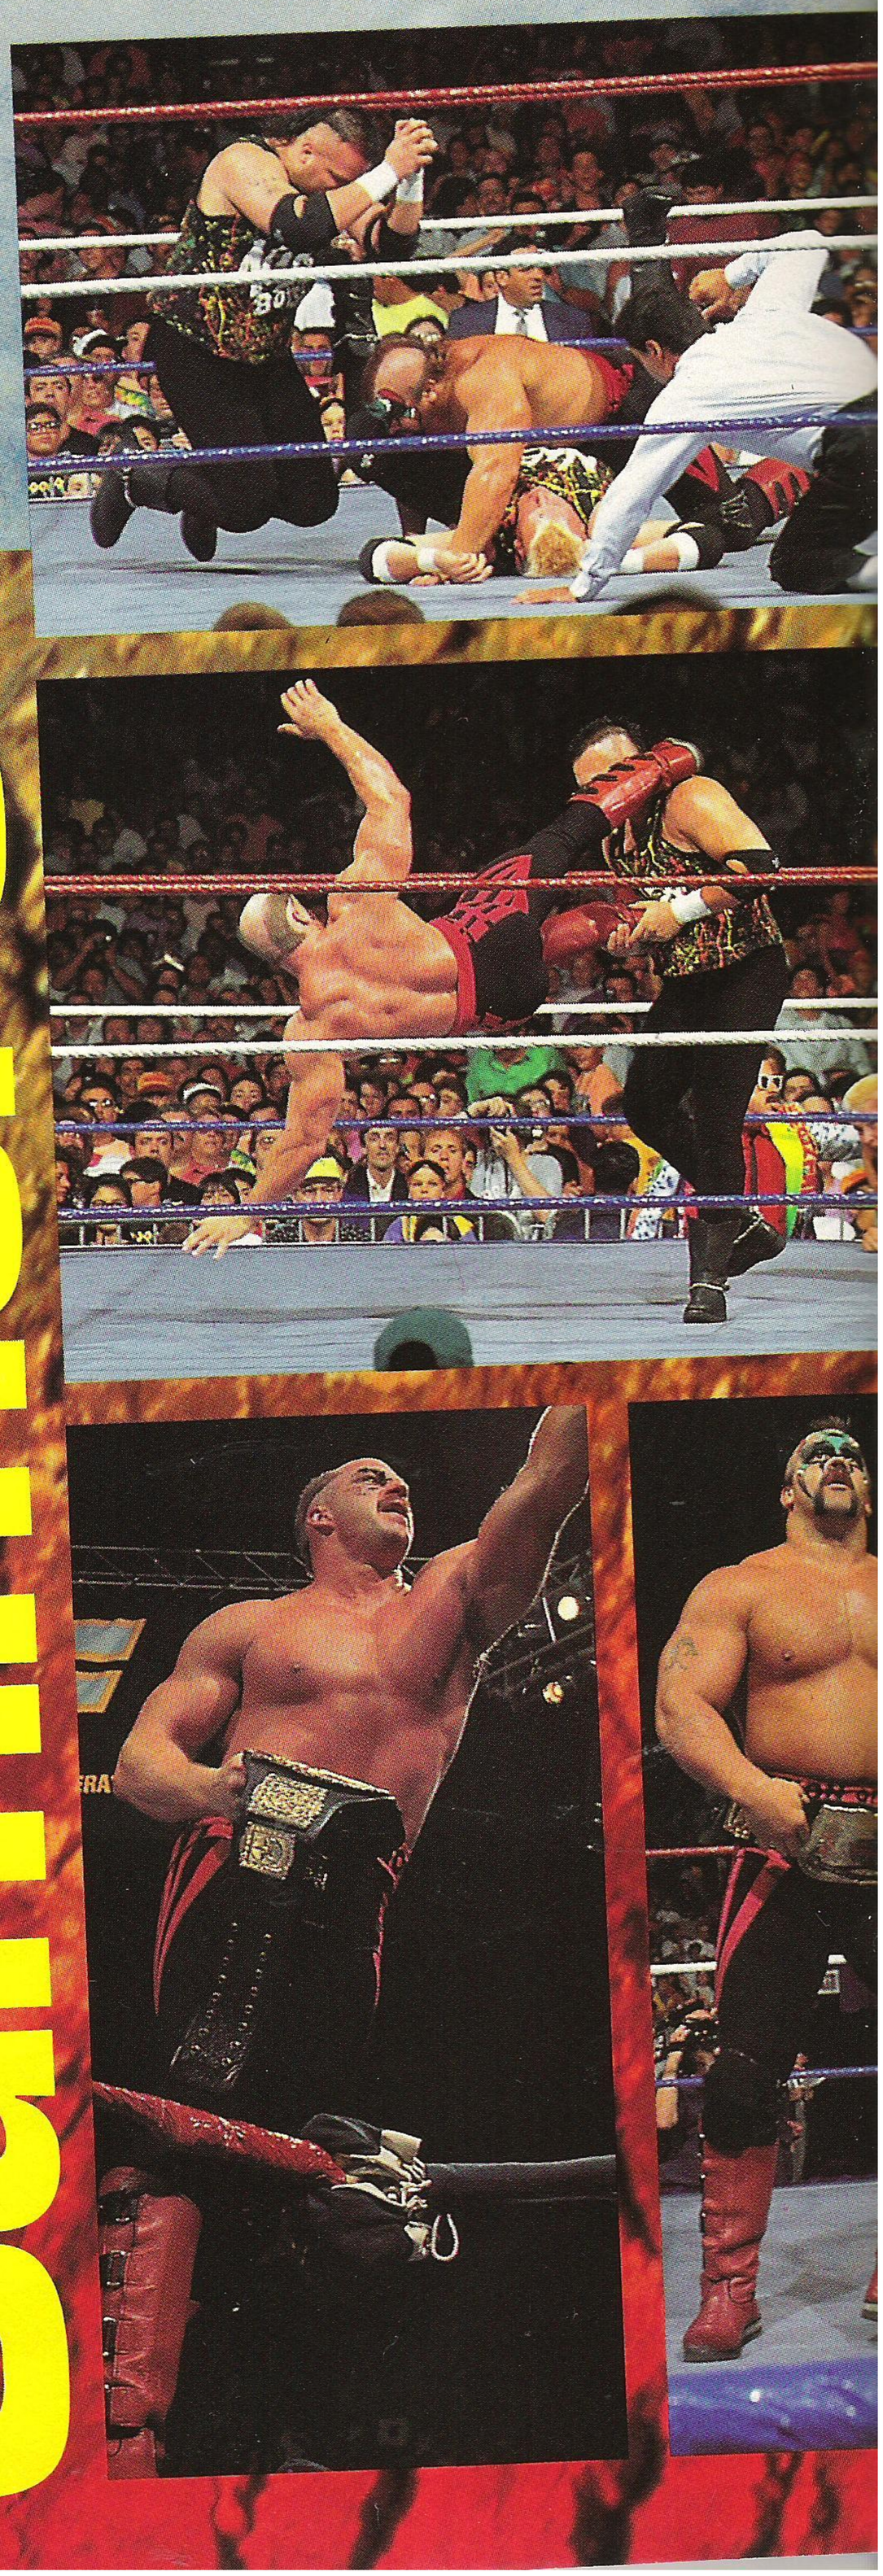

The victory was made even sweeter by the fact that Hit Man's parents, Stu and Helen Hart, were at ringside to see their son in his finest moment of glory.

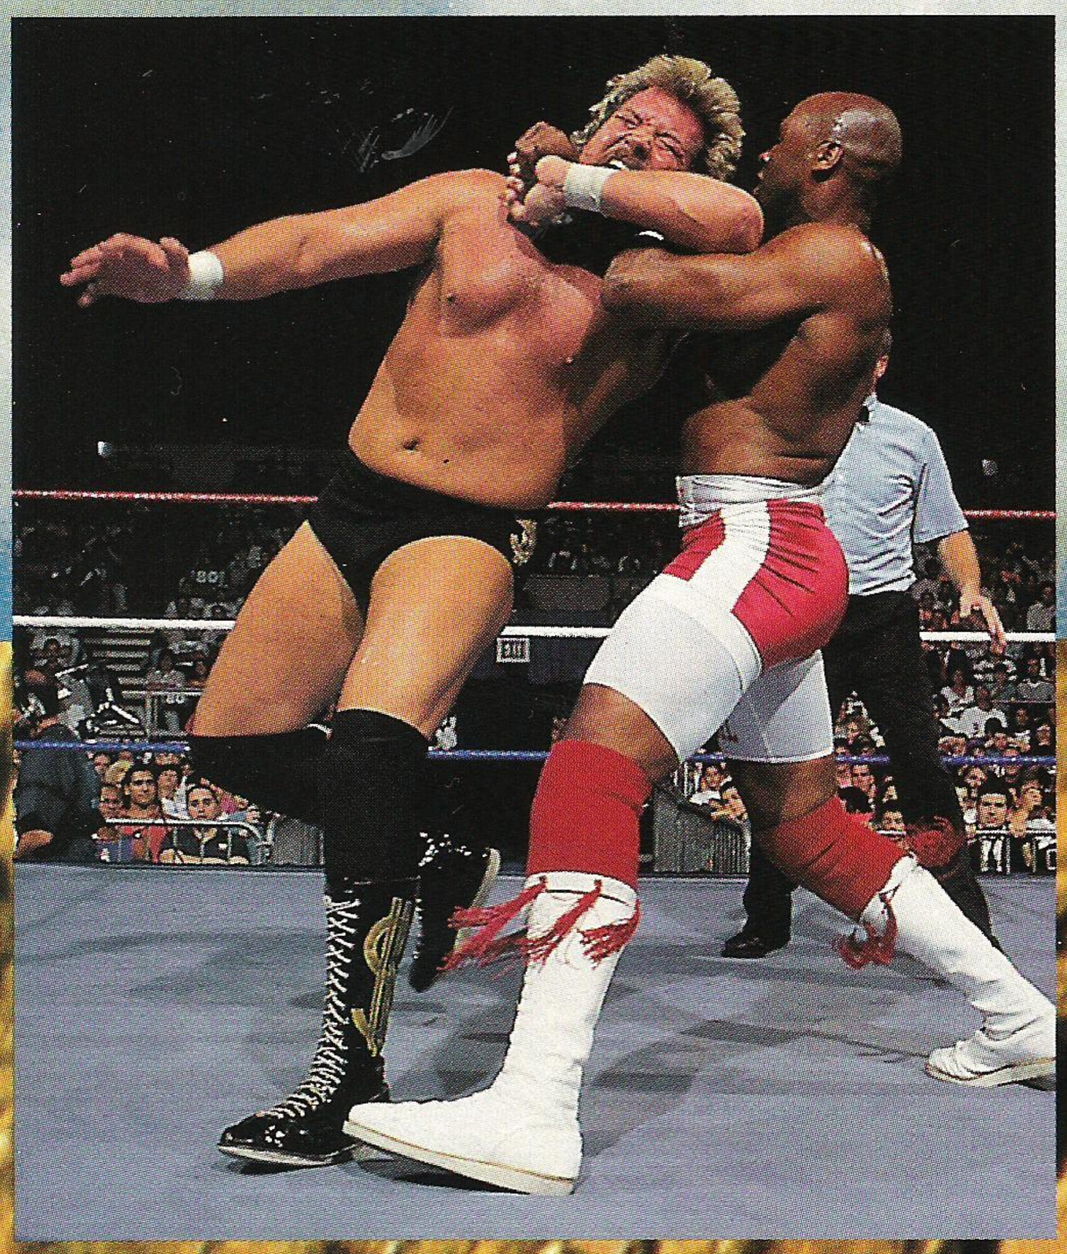

What made this altercation so intriguing was the almost identical attributes of the competitors, each a second generation wrestler with extensive technical credentials and a penchant for brawling. Each are about the same age, weight and height, and neither has ever gone down easily.

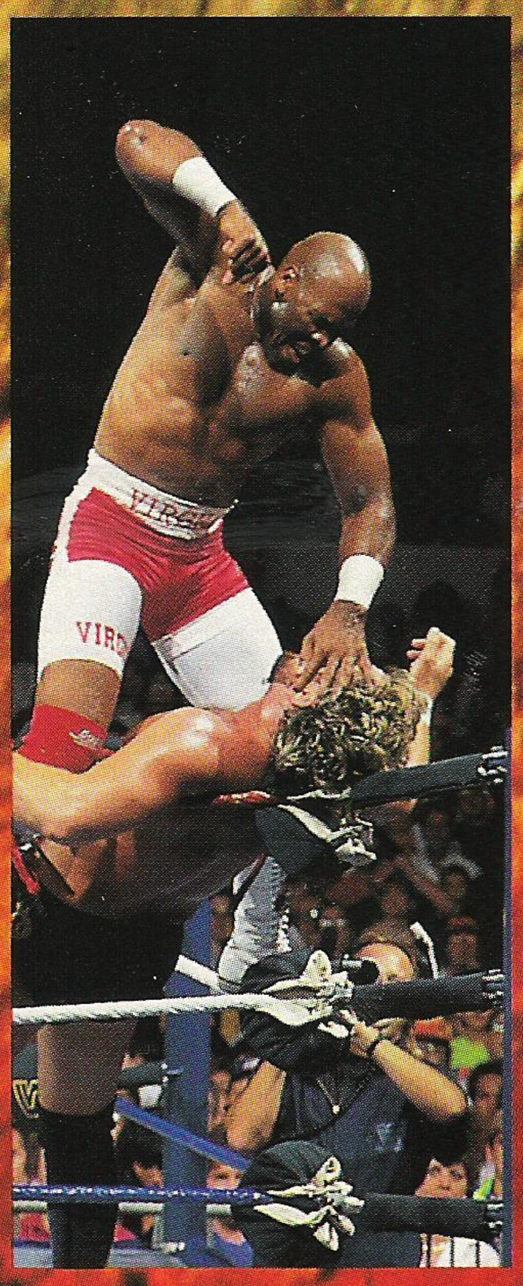

SummerSlam was no exception. Although Hart would eventually get the duke, Perfect fought a worthy battle.

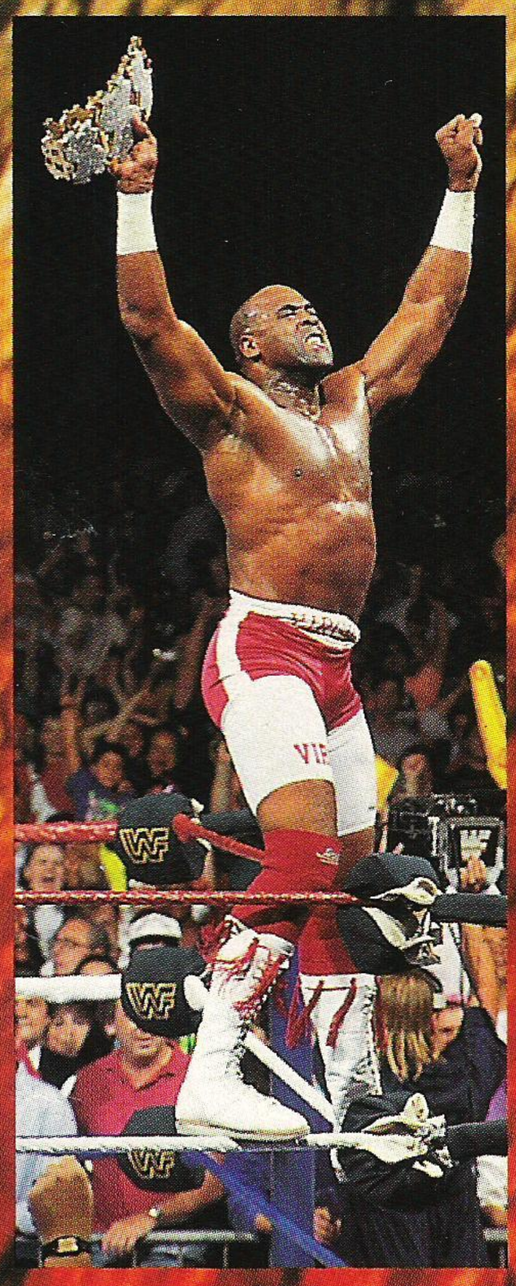

Still, Hit Man shined throughout the contest. Early on, he baffled Perfect by bounding off the ropes, taking to mid-air and snaring the arrogant blond with a crucifix. Before Perfect had time to recuperate, he was smothered with a flying cross-bodyblock and victimized by a sunset flip from the ring apron. While Perfect was able to avoid being pinned by these moves, he did entertain second thoughts about taking the match. At one point he even started to walk back to the dressing room, but Hart followed him, delivered a punch and tossed him back into the ring.

Ever resourceful, Perfect seized an opportunity when the referee squeezed

In one of the most thrilling SummerSlam altercations, the Legion of Doom, Hawk and Animal, defeated the Nasty Boys, Knobbs and Sags, for the World Wrestling Federation Tag Team Championship. The Legion of Doom won this no-disqualification, no-count-out match when they used the feared Doomsday Device. The Million Dollar Man lost his Million Dollar Belt to former bodyguard Virgil. Virgil scored the win after ramming DiBiase's skull into an unprotected turnbuckle.

WWF RAW

between the two athletes. While Bret was looking at the official, Perfect reached over the arbiter's shoulder and tattooed the challenger with a right to the chin. Now it was Perfect's turn to take control of the match. Taking the fight outside the ring, Perfect viciously chopped his opponent and—just to show who was in the driver's seat—used him as a human stepladder to re-enter the squared circle.

The humiliating gesture only increased Hart's desire to outclass his opponent. Several times Perfect executed his finest moves, but Hit Man refused to quit, kicking out before the ref's hand could slap the mat a third time.

Believing that Perfect was spent, Hart attempted to put him away with the Sharpshooter—the Hit Man's unique version of the leg grapevine. This prompted Perfect's manager at the time, Coach, to hop onto the ring apron to divert the contender's attention. Releasing Perfect, Bret slugged the adviser but quickly fell victim to a new surge by the Intercontinental Champion.

Perfect pummeled Hart onto the mat and dropped legs onto the challenger's sternum. Perhaps anybody else would have been finished at this stage. But Hit Man refused to leave without the Intercontinental Championship. When Perfect tried another legdrop, Hart blocked it by holding on to his opponent's foot, then stood up to execute a flawless Sharpshooter. Within seconds, fans watching in Canada were celebrating their country's first WWF Intercontinental Champion, Bret "Hit Man" Hart.

But no one in the Great White North

was upset by the loss of another countryman, the Mountie, in a unique Jailhouse Match against the Big Boss Man. In this battle between two lawmen, the Boss Man turned out to be the judge, jury and executioner.

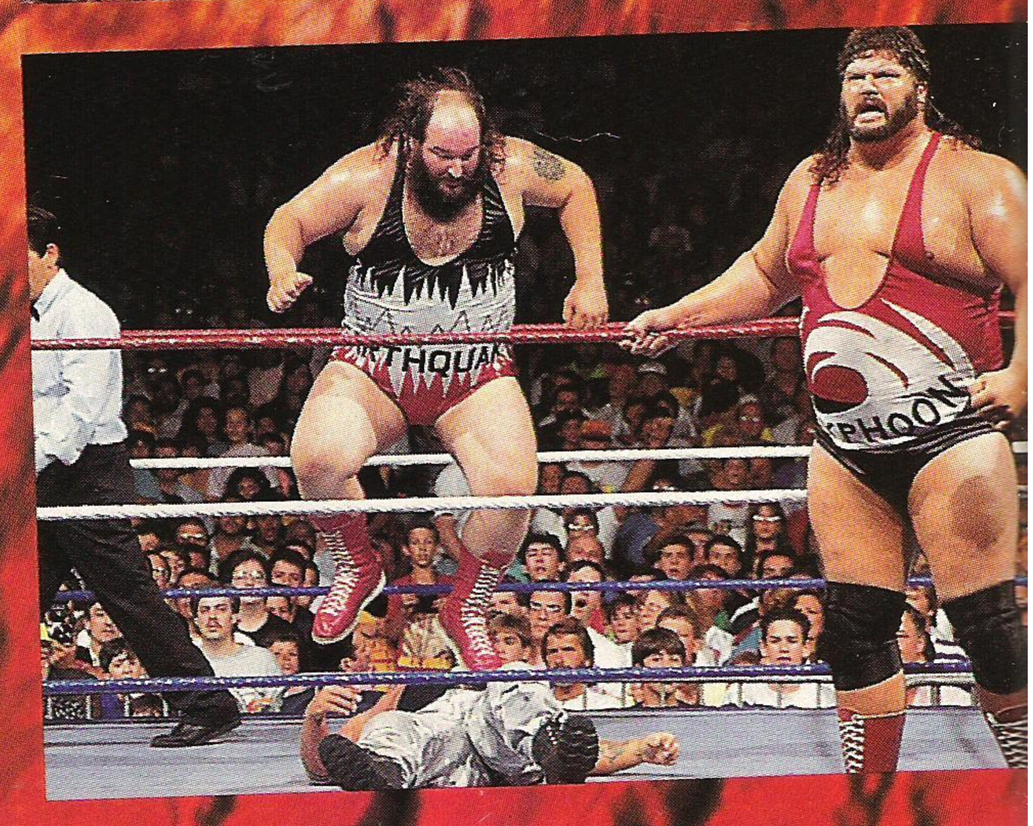

Despite his brutalization of the large man from Georgia, the Mountie eventually succumbed to the Boss Man slam and—with the former corrections officer helping out—was handcuffed by two of New York's Finest and transported to a local jail. With the vast majority of the live audience and the pay-per-view audience watching with approval, the Mountie had his mug shot and fingerprints taken and was then booked. In the holding cell, he was approached by a drunk who took exception to the Canadian's loud demeanor and by another inmate who believed in the Mountie's code: He too wanted to get his man.

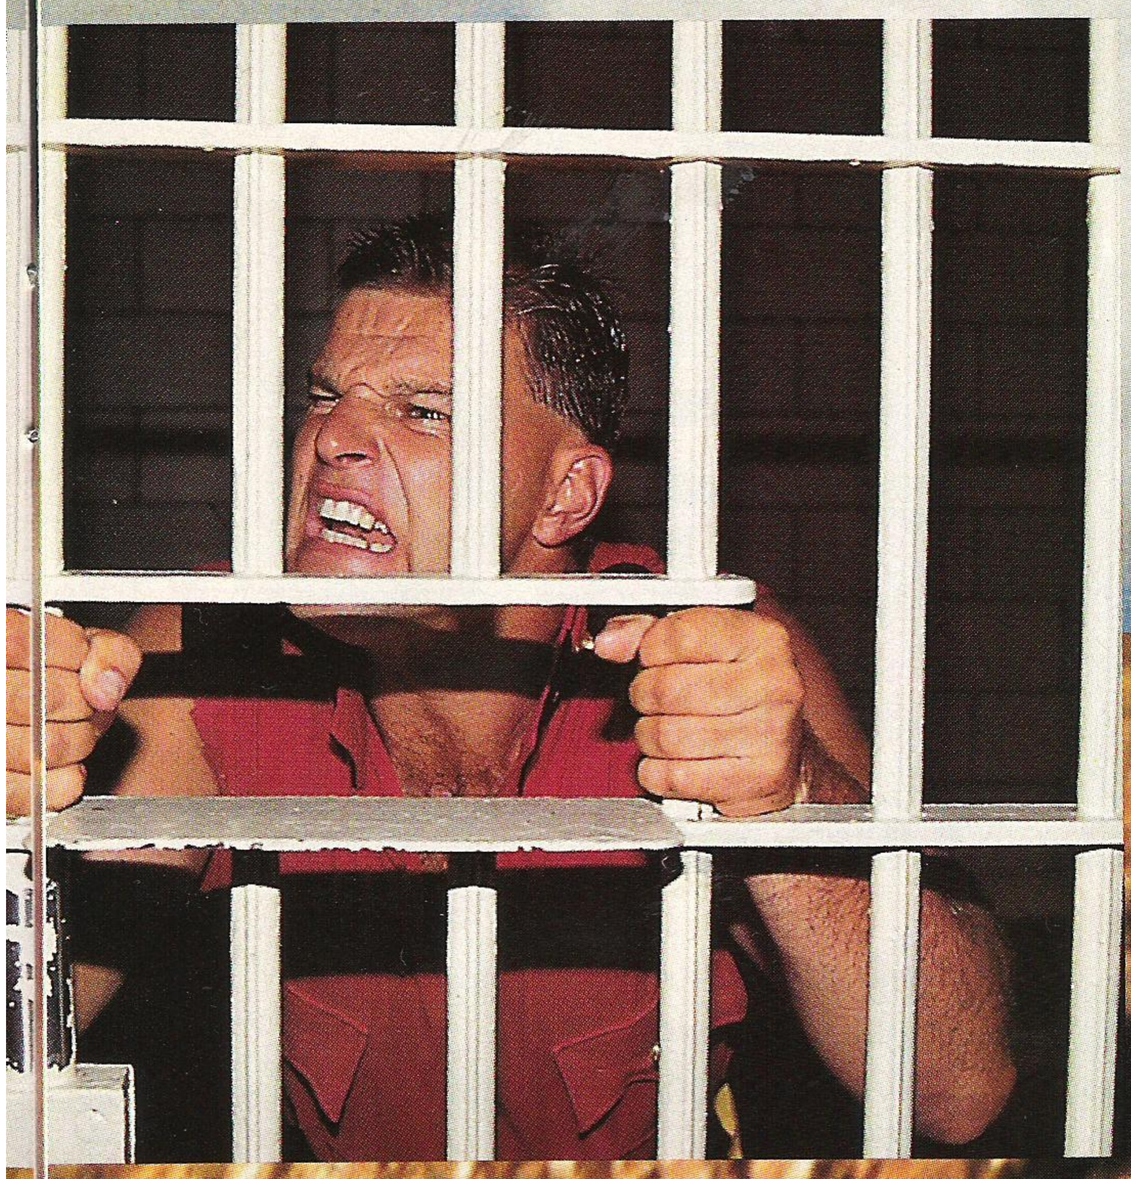

In other action, the match between Irwin R. Schyster, or IRS, and Greg "The Hammer" Valentine pitted the master of the 1040 form against the master of the figure-four leglock. Several times during the battle, Hammer almost scored the win by successfully clamping on his hold. But—like a tax cheat who is always one step ahead of the government—IRS would find a loophole. Finally, the Hammer's deadline expired. As he twisted IRS's legs in another figure-four attempt, Valentine was rolled into an inside cradle and beaten.

The Natural Disasters, Earthquake and Typhoon, threw their immense weight around against the Bushwhackers, Luke and Butch. But after the match ended—when Earthquake vertical-splashed Luke for the pin—the scales were tipped against the victors. As Earthquake and Typhoon sized up the Bushwhackers' second, Andre the Giant, hoping to re-injure his leg, the Legion of Doom rushed to ringside. When the Natural Disasters fled, Andre got in a swipe or two with his metal crutches.

The Big Boss Man defeated the Mountie in a Jailhouse Match. After he was beaten, the Mountie was handcuffed by New York City policemen and taken to a holding cell in the city. In six-man tag team action, the Dragon, the British Bulldog and the Texas Tornado downed the Warlord and Power and Glory. The Natural Disasters outdid Luke and Butch of the Bushwhackers, and IRS pinned Greg the Hammer.

In a six-man tag team match, the talented trio of the Dragon, British Bulldog and Texas Tornado had all the power and took all the glory when they bested Hercules and Paul Roma—aka Power and Glory—and the Warlord in the SummerSlam opener. The Dragon got the win by delivering a flying bodypress to Paul Roma. WF

SUMMERSLAM RESULTS

1. Texas Tornado, the Dragon and British Bulldog defeated Power and Glory (Hercules and Paul Roma) when the Dragon squashed Roma with a flying bodypress.

2. Bret "Hit Man" Hart took the WWF Intercontinental Title when Mr. Perfect submitted to the Sharpshooter.

3. The Natural Disasters (Earthquake and Typhoon) conquered the Bushwhackers (Luke and Butch) after Earthquake smothered Luke with the vertical splash.

4. Virgil grabbed the Million Dollar Belt from Ted DiBiase, reviving himself to cover his former boss for the pin after both men had been knocked out.

5. Big Boss Man won a Jailhouse Match with the Mountie by implementing the Boss Man Slam.

6. Legion of Doom (Hawk and Animal) seized the tag team belts from the Nasty Boys (Knobbs and Sags) when Hawk pinned Sags following the Doomsday Device.

7. IRS inside-cradled Greg "The Hammer" Valentine.

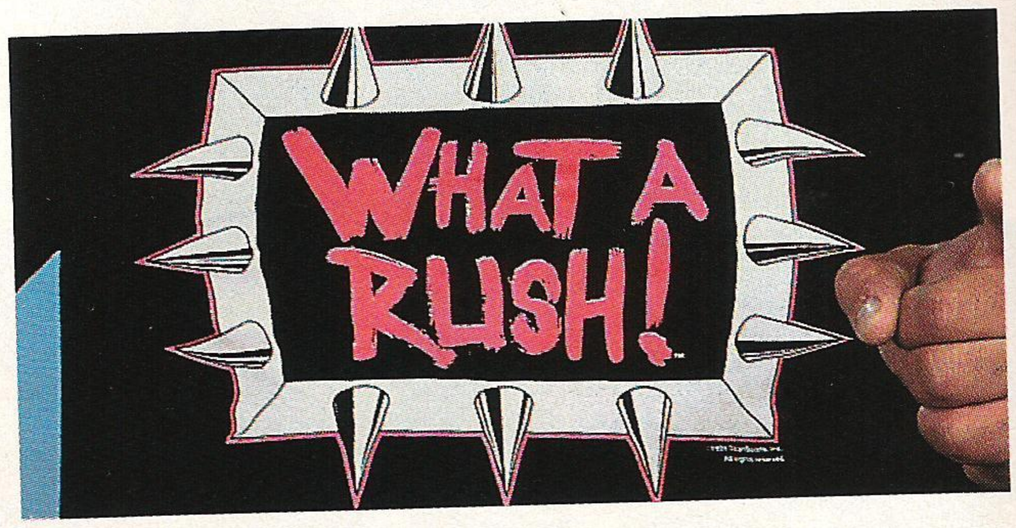

8. Hulk Hogan and Ultimate Warrior overcame Sgt. Slaughter, Colonel Mustafa and General Adnan when Hogan blinded Slaughter with powder and pinned him.

WWF TRIVIA

By Larry Humber

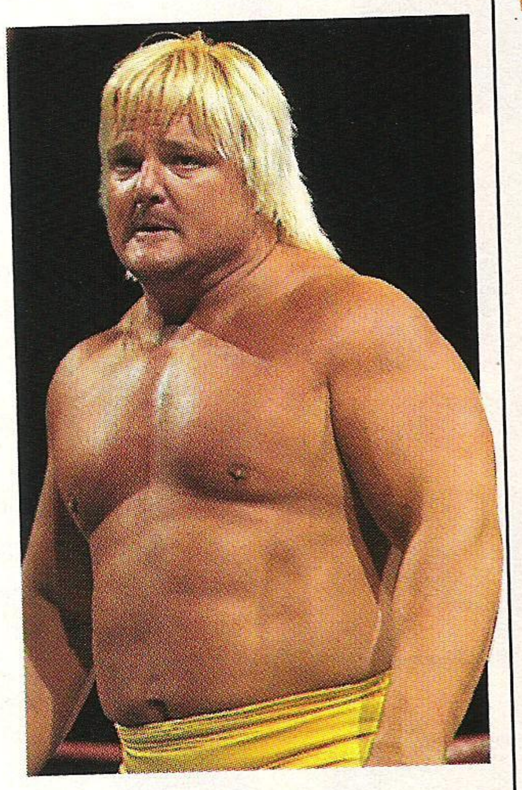

It's time for more WWF Trivia. There are five categories of questions. Award yourself one point for answering the first question, two points for the second and three for the third. A perfect score is 30, and all the answers can be found in back issues of WWF Magazine.

If you score between 25-30, you're a WWF whiz. Between 20-25, nice work. Between 15-20, not bad. Less than 10, you better study up.

A Match Made in Heaven

TURNS INTO A LIVING HELL

The Match Made in Heaven transformed into a night of unholy terror when the Snake and the Undertaker destroyed the wedding reception. If it hadn't been for Sid Justice, there's no telling what might've happened

It was a peek into the heart of a being so foul he could make Dracula shudder. Jake "The Snake" Roberts turned the joyous wedding reception of Macho Man Randy Savage and Ms. Elizabeth Macho from a Match Made in Heaven into a Match truly made in Hell. Jake's abominable plot has so psychologically scarred Elizabeth she may never recover. At the same time, the despicable act of the Snake has unleashed a vengeful fury that may catapult him into the abyss.

The world saw it. Jake, pretending friendship, placed a cobra in a gift for the newlyweds. Hark back to that night following SummerSlam.

At one of New York's finest restaurants, the newlyweds were the stars of a glorious party. Members of Elizabeth's and Savage's families sat at the head table with the duo as hundreds of people—including WWF superstar Sid Justice, Mean Gene Okerlund and a host of other WWF luminaries—wished the couple well. Gene offered a traditional champagne toast to the bride and groom, after which Randy and Elizabeth smiled and kissed each other.

Then it was time for the first dance. Randy took Elizabeth by the hand. Dancing to beautiful music, they looked into one another's eyes.

It was a most happy and festive occasion. She tossed her bouquet and then, with Randy at her side, cut the wedding cake. They were completely happy. But that happiness would be shattered seconds later.

Always one to be different, the Macho Man decided to break tradition and open some of their wedding gifts. Although his wife tried to dissuade him from doing so, Savage opened two boxes containing a large crystal vase and a solid gold statue.

Elizabeth soon joined Randy. She picked up a present and, beaming with gratitude, opened it. Inside was death. Hissing, flaring its hood and with jaws agape, an Asian cobra reared from the package. As Elizabeth stood transfixed, it struck. Only Elizabeth's lightning-quick reflexes saved her. She reeled backward. Randy rushed to her side and tried frantically to calm her.

Suddenly, two uninvited guests, the Undertaker and Paul Bearer, appeared. The Undertaker bashed an unsuspecting Grand prize winner will be announced December 29, 1991.

Savage over the skull with a brass urn, knocking him out cold. When Elizabeth saw what had happened to her husband, she was horrified.

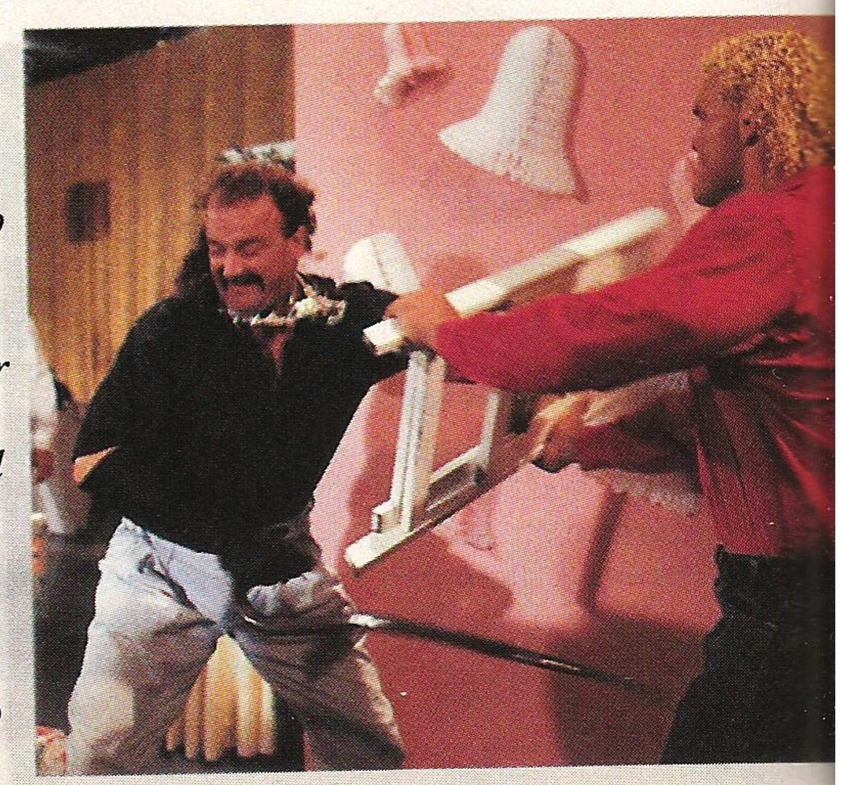

Just then, another uninvited guest, Jake the Snake, stalked into the reception. He picked up the box into which the cobra had retreated and walked toward Elizabeth.

"Now, princess," he hissed, "where are the hands of the prince? He's in the hands of the Undertaker...Let the nightmare begin..."

Full of evil, the Snake pointed the cobra's head close to Elizabeth's face. She seemed doomed until Sid Justice—who was the only man at the party with enough courage to take on the Snake—rushed to the fallen family's aid. He took a swipe at the Undertaker and then warded off Jake. Not wanting any part of real justice, the Snake and his pals made a hasty exit. However, before they were out the door, Jake turned to a terrified waiter and whispered, "A Match Made in Heaven, huh? Hope they enjoy the honeymoon..."

They didn't. In fact, Elizabeth has been in dire straits ever since the assault. She doesn't sleep. She frets. She shakes. Savage has been caring and providing for Elizabeth in her time of need. And deep in his heart, Randy desires redress from the Snake. Savage plans to seek retribution. As of press time, the Macho Man had a meeting with WWF President Jack Tunney and asked to be reinstated as a wrestler. When Tunney refused to comply, the Macho Man flew into a rage and destroyed the president's office. Savage is determined to have his way.

One way or another, Savage says, he will get even with the Snake and the Undertaker. Randy sees this issue as a family matter. "I can handle people out to wreck me," he says, "but my wife... No, don't ever threaten my wife...." WF

CAN SLAUGHTER LIVE WITH HIS PAST?

HAWANIA

Humbled at SummerSlam, kicked like a cur, his dreams of glory and conquest smashed, Sgt. Slaughter has been reduced to a shell of a man. Gone are the jut-jawed confidence, the arrogant bellowing, the contempt for those weaker than he. Gone are the swagger, the bluster, the lust to destroy. The cashiered drill instructor has been crushed. He is a man lost, without goals, minus purpose and scourged with doubts about the turn his life has taken.

Psychologists say that nothing tears apart a person more than remorse—questioning past misdeeds and realizing that the path one has taken has led to a cruel end, to total disaster. And that's what's happening to Sgt. Slaughter, the man who allied himself with the ruthless General Adnan and Colonel Mustafa, the man who thought that might makes right, the man who so desired the WWF Championship that he sold out all his ideals in order to gain it.

Slaughter barely survived the Match Made in Hell. Now hell-hounds of his conscience are pursuing him, snapping at his heels, their yowling keeping him awake nights and dogging his days. He is plagued by his past and fearful of its effect on his future.

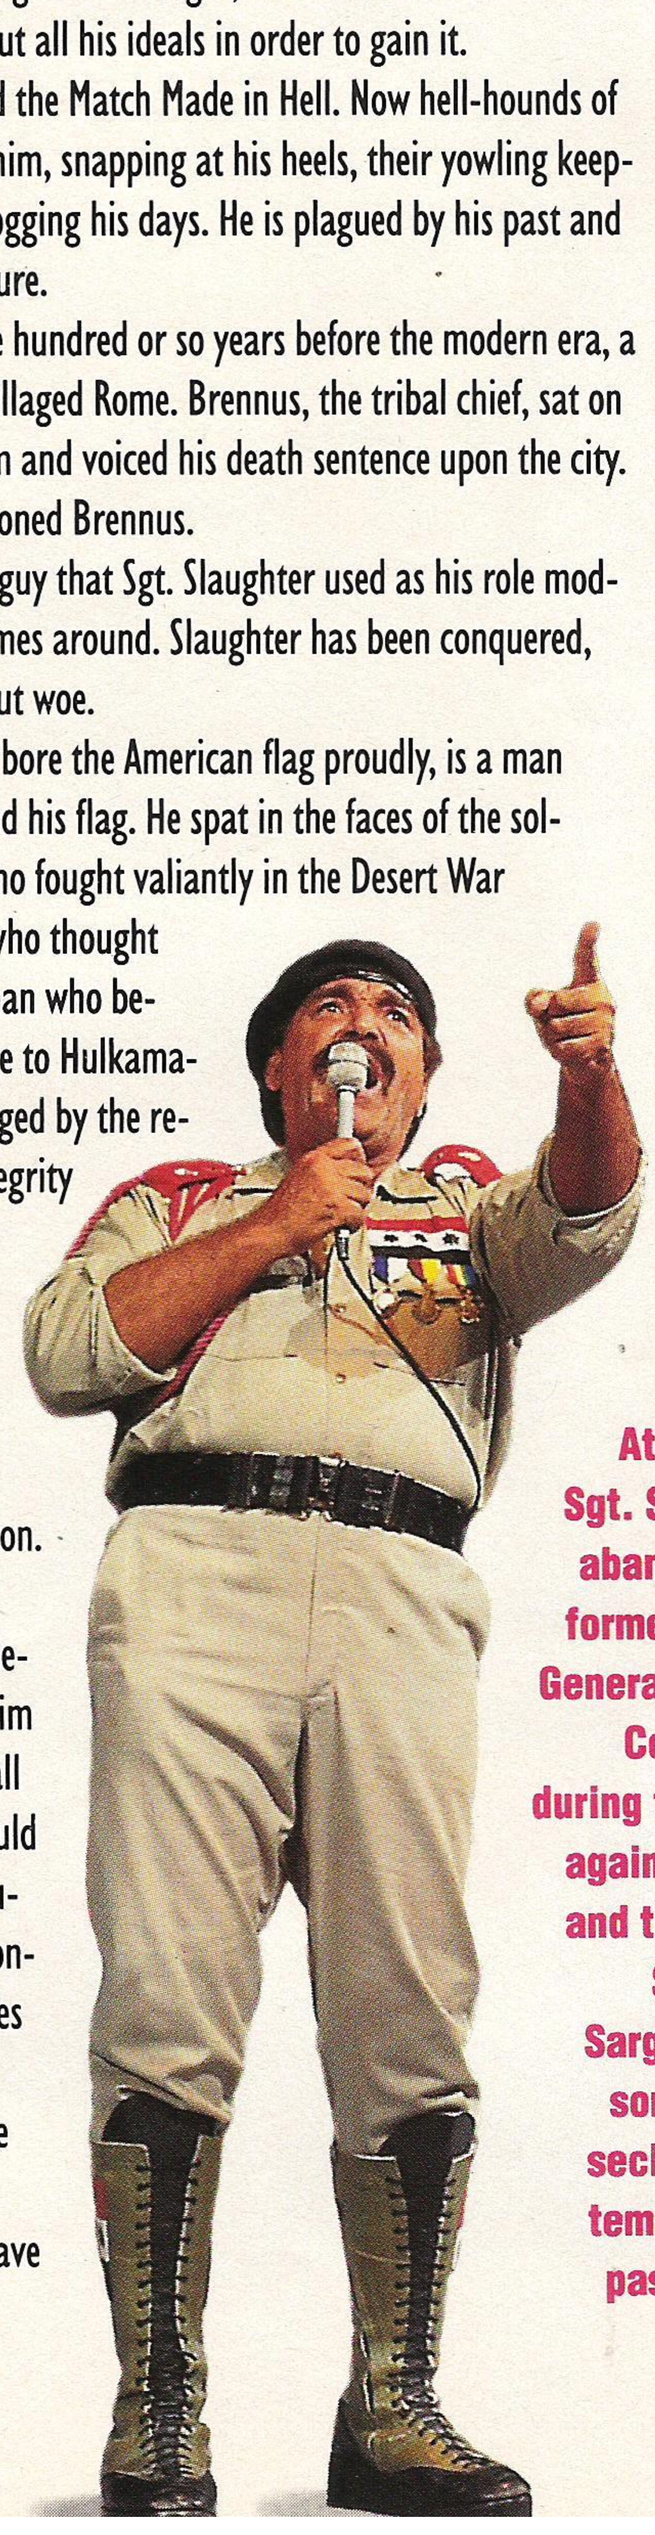

Consider this irony. Three hundred or so years before the modern era, a Celtic tribe conquered and pillaged Rome. Brennus, the tribal chief, sat on a throne in the Roman Forum and voiced his death sentence upon the city. "Woe to the conquered," intoned Brennus.

Brennus was the kind of guy that Sgt. Slaughter used as his role model. But what goes around comes around. Slaughter has been conquered, and his life is now nothing but woe.

Sgt. Slaughter, who once bore the American flag proudly, is a man without a country. He scorned his flag. He spat in the faces of the soldiers, marines and sailors who fought valiantly in the Desert War against Iraq. Now the man who thought himself the conqueror, the man who believed that he could lay waste to Hulkamania and all it means, is besieged by the realization that he sold his integrity purely out of greed.

Friends, family, old comrades in arms—Slaughter turned his back on all of them in his effort to be crowned WWF Champion. Searching and seeking, he found in General Adnan someone he believed could take him to the very top. Adnan was all Slaughter's fevered mind could respect, a man who used brutality to attain his ends. A conniver without moral strictures to inhibit his actions. A man who lied, cheated and, above all, was a survivor.

In one way, one would have to agree that Slaughter was right. Adnan has survived. Slaughter has not.

At SummerSlam, Sgt. Slaughter was abandoned by his former comrades, General Adnan and Col. Mustafa, during their match against the Hulk and the Warrior. Since then, Sarge has been somewhere in seclusion contemplating his past actions.

Charlie Wilcox has just discovered the solution for all life's little problems.

Another irony is Slaughter believed that holding the championship—which he did until Hulk Hogan took it from him—would bring contentment. No way. He learned that the head that wears the crown rests uneasily. More than that, he found he did not attain what he desired most: respect. The world grieved that the WWF Championship Belt was around Slaughter's waist. He knew that millions of people thought that he bought it by treachery and that he wore it in shame.

HE WAS WEAK LIKE ALL AMERICANS

What will happen to the pathetic Sgt. Slaughter? WWF Magazine asked around and gathered the following opinions.

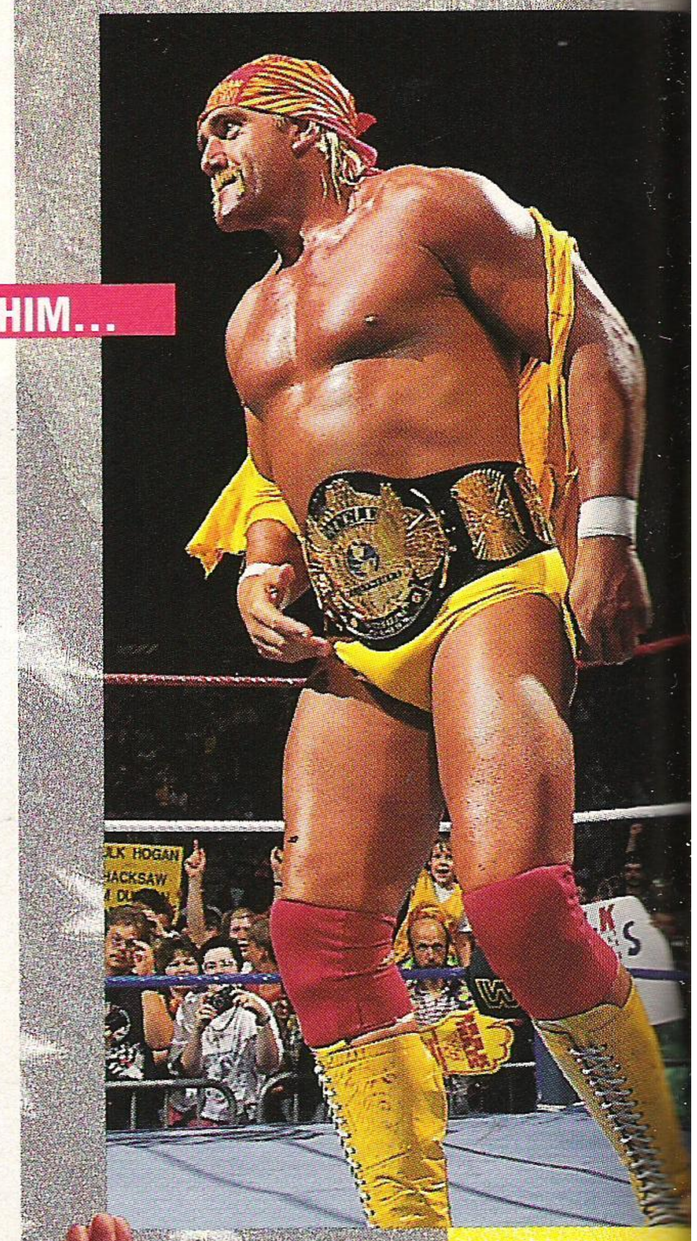

"Hey, he blew it," says broadcast journalist—we use the term loosely—Bobby "The Brain" Heenan. "Underneath all that bulk he's nothing but a patsy. Slaughter's a good name for him. Because that's what happened to the humanoid creep."

"Sgt. Slaughter is coward," says Mustafa. "He is camel dung."

"He was weak, like all Americans," says Adnan through an interpreter, as he speaks no English. "He is goat offal."

"I can't feel sorry for him after all the bad he's done," says Hulk Hogan. "He's got a lot to make up for. I wonder if he's a big enough man to do it."

I CAN'T FEEL SORRY FOR HIM...

"I guess way down I do feel sorry for him," says the new Mrs. Savage, the lovely Elizabeth. "My husband took some wrong turns in his career, although not as drastic as Slaughter's. He came back. Maybe Slaughter can."

WWF Magazine tracked down Slaughter to get his thoughts. It wasn't easy. These days he shies away from publicity. He wants to be alone. But we persisted and found him in a small hotel, a dingy place where few people go. His door wasn't even locked. We walked into his room and found him with his head in his hands. At his feet was a crumpled American flag.

"Sarge," we asked, "can we talk a minute?"

"I don't want to talk to you," he whispered. "I've got plenty of other more important people to talk to. They were out there in the desert. They died in the sky. They sat in the stinking holds of troop ships. They waited here at home for their loved ones. No, Sergeant Slaughter doesn't want to talk to WWF Magazine."

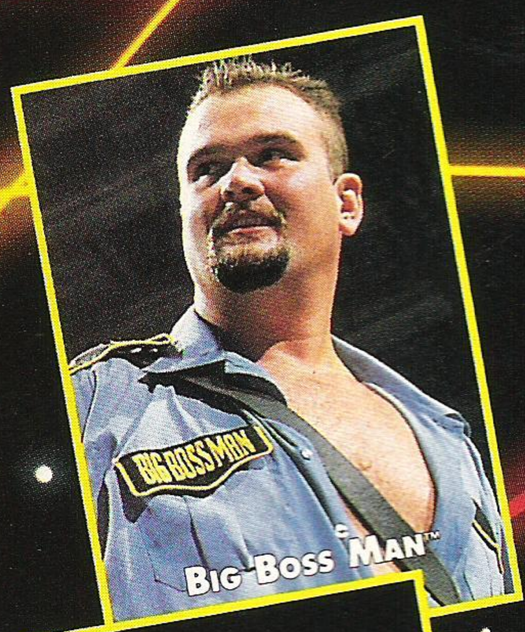

I GUESS WAY DOWN I DO FEEL SORRY FOR HIM

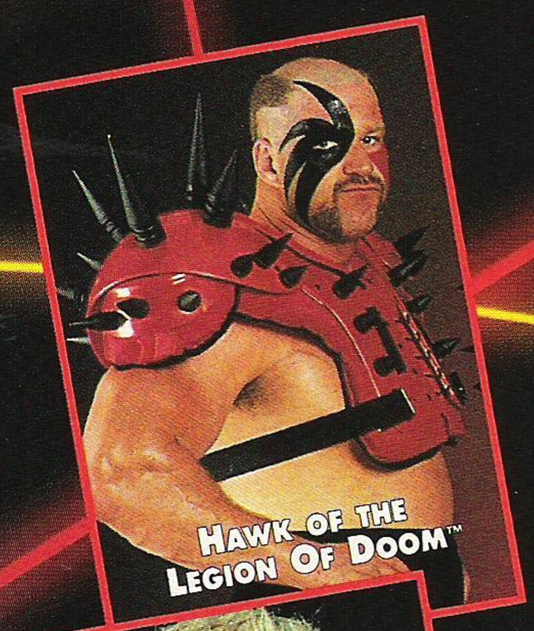

SERGEANT SLAUGHTER IS COWARD

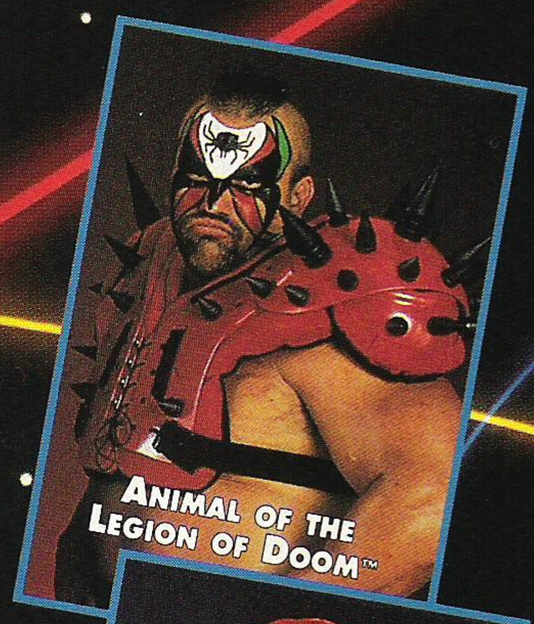

We left Slaughter, his head in his hands, mumbling. As we walked away, we thought we heard him whisper to himself, something about "destiny." WF

SALT OF THE EARTH

SID JUSTICE COMES FROM THE LAND

He is a redwood of a man, tall, broad shouldered and rippling with muscles. He towers above ordinary men in stature and in the unflinching purpose of his mental outlook. He is a man whose feet are rooted in the land, and from the land on which he grew up he derives his strength.

We give you Sid Justice, who has the WWF world puzzled, talking and waiting for the major impact everyone suspects he will have on the squared circle. We give you a man born and raised on a farm in Arkansas, imbued with the hard-working values of people who rise before dawn to till the earth and milk the cows. These people know their fate depends not only upon their honest toil but also upon the vagaries of nature. Flood, drought, wind and insect plagues can wipe out years of effort, but they go on. They take the cards that destiny deals them and move forward. Sid Justice is the American farmer, stemming from a lifestyle that is the backbone of this country. And his background bodes well for him in the WWF.

WWF Magazine has been probing the roots of Sid Justice. We've come up with some interesting insights into his personality. A private man, Sid doesn't often talk about himself, but we have unearthed facts about this wrestler that could well influence his course in the WWF.

Sid Justice takes nothing for granted. He knows that a bolt of lightning can wipe out an entire herd of cattle. He knows that too much rain rots the crops and too little burns them out. He knows that the lot of the farmer is to persevere—and that is exactly what he has promised to do in the struggles of the ring.

An Arkansan farmer who knew Justice as a boy has this to say about him. "He never complained. I watched him as a youngster, weeding the kitchen garden. I watched him as he got older, learning to plant, then running the combine or making a farm pond for the cattle. He had to do a man's work when he was only 12 years old."

Justice learned to accept his lot and take joy in it. He learned at a young age that his was the honorable occupation of growing the food upon which people depend. There is, he still feels, nothing more basic to helping society. He also learned that he could expect no breaks. People who get their dinner out of a cellophane package from a supermarket seldom think of the individuals who sweated to produce the grain, the cattle, the eggs and everything else upon which their lives depend. Sid expects no accolades or favors from anyone.

We asked Sid about how he grew from a hard-working lad on the farm to a potential WWF superstar. He told us things that revealed that here is a man who has had the same long-term goals since his youth.

Baling hay, tossing it into the back of a pickup truck and then up into the loft was brutal work. The wire around the bales cut his hands. If the hay was damp, it weighed a ton. Then there was the pressure to get it baled and in before the rain. As Sid worked, he dreamed. He knew that he could toss men around like bales of hay. Maybe—just maybe—he could make his living in the ring. That was a long time ago.

Sid held fast to his dreams. So did his grandfather, a man stricken with polio at a young age, who raised him and instilled the values that stay with Justice to this day.

The influence of his grandfather has had another effect on Justice. Justice knows that there is more to strength than just a muscular body. It's in the spirit, too. And it doesn't grow old.

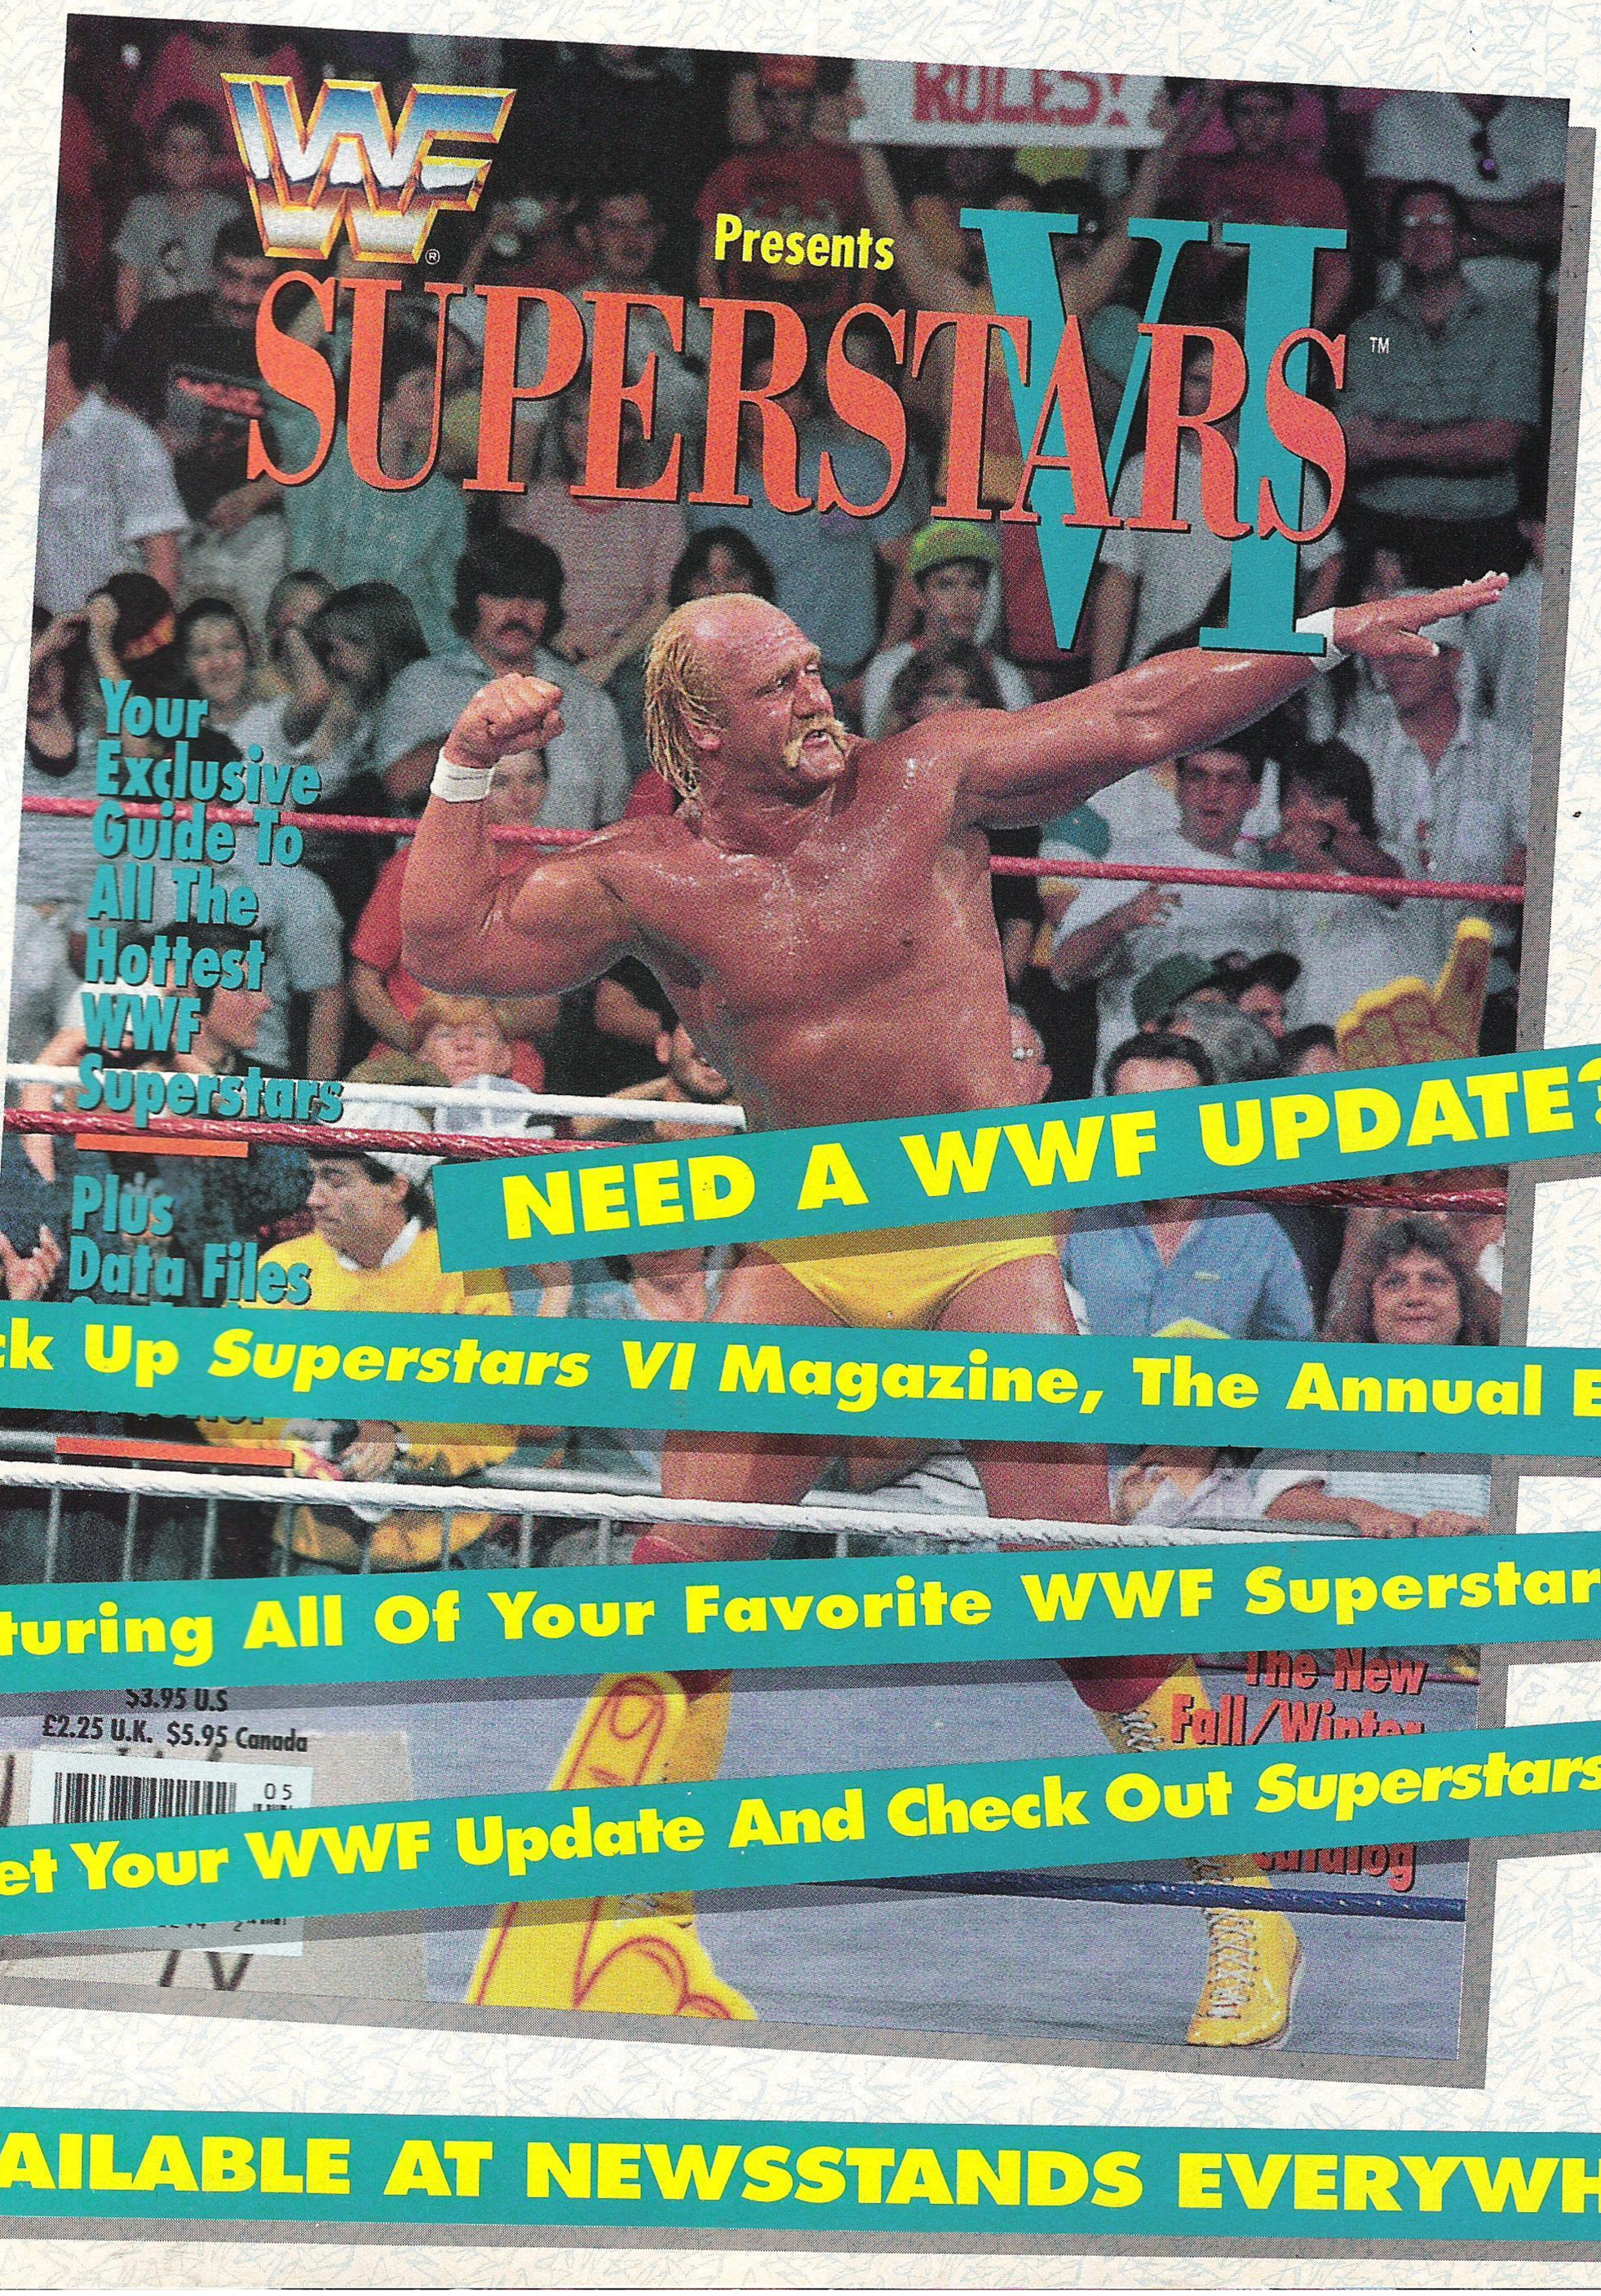

"No one gets to be a real person without someone else behind them, someone who teaches and inspires," Justice says. "Everyone out there had somebody, somebody who's probably elderly now. Never forget, they are the source of your strength."

There's also another side to Sid—it's a tougher side. He does right as he sees right. He has values as he sees values. Those values are simple, but the basis of a solid, productive life.

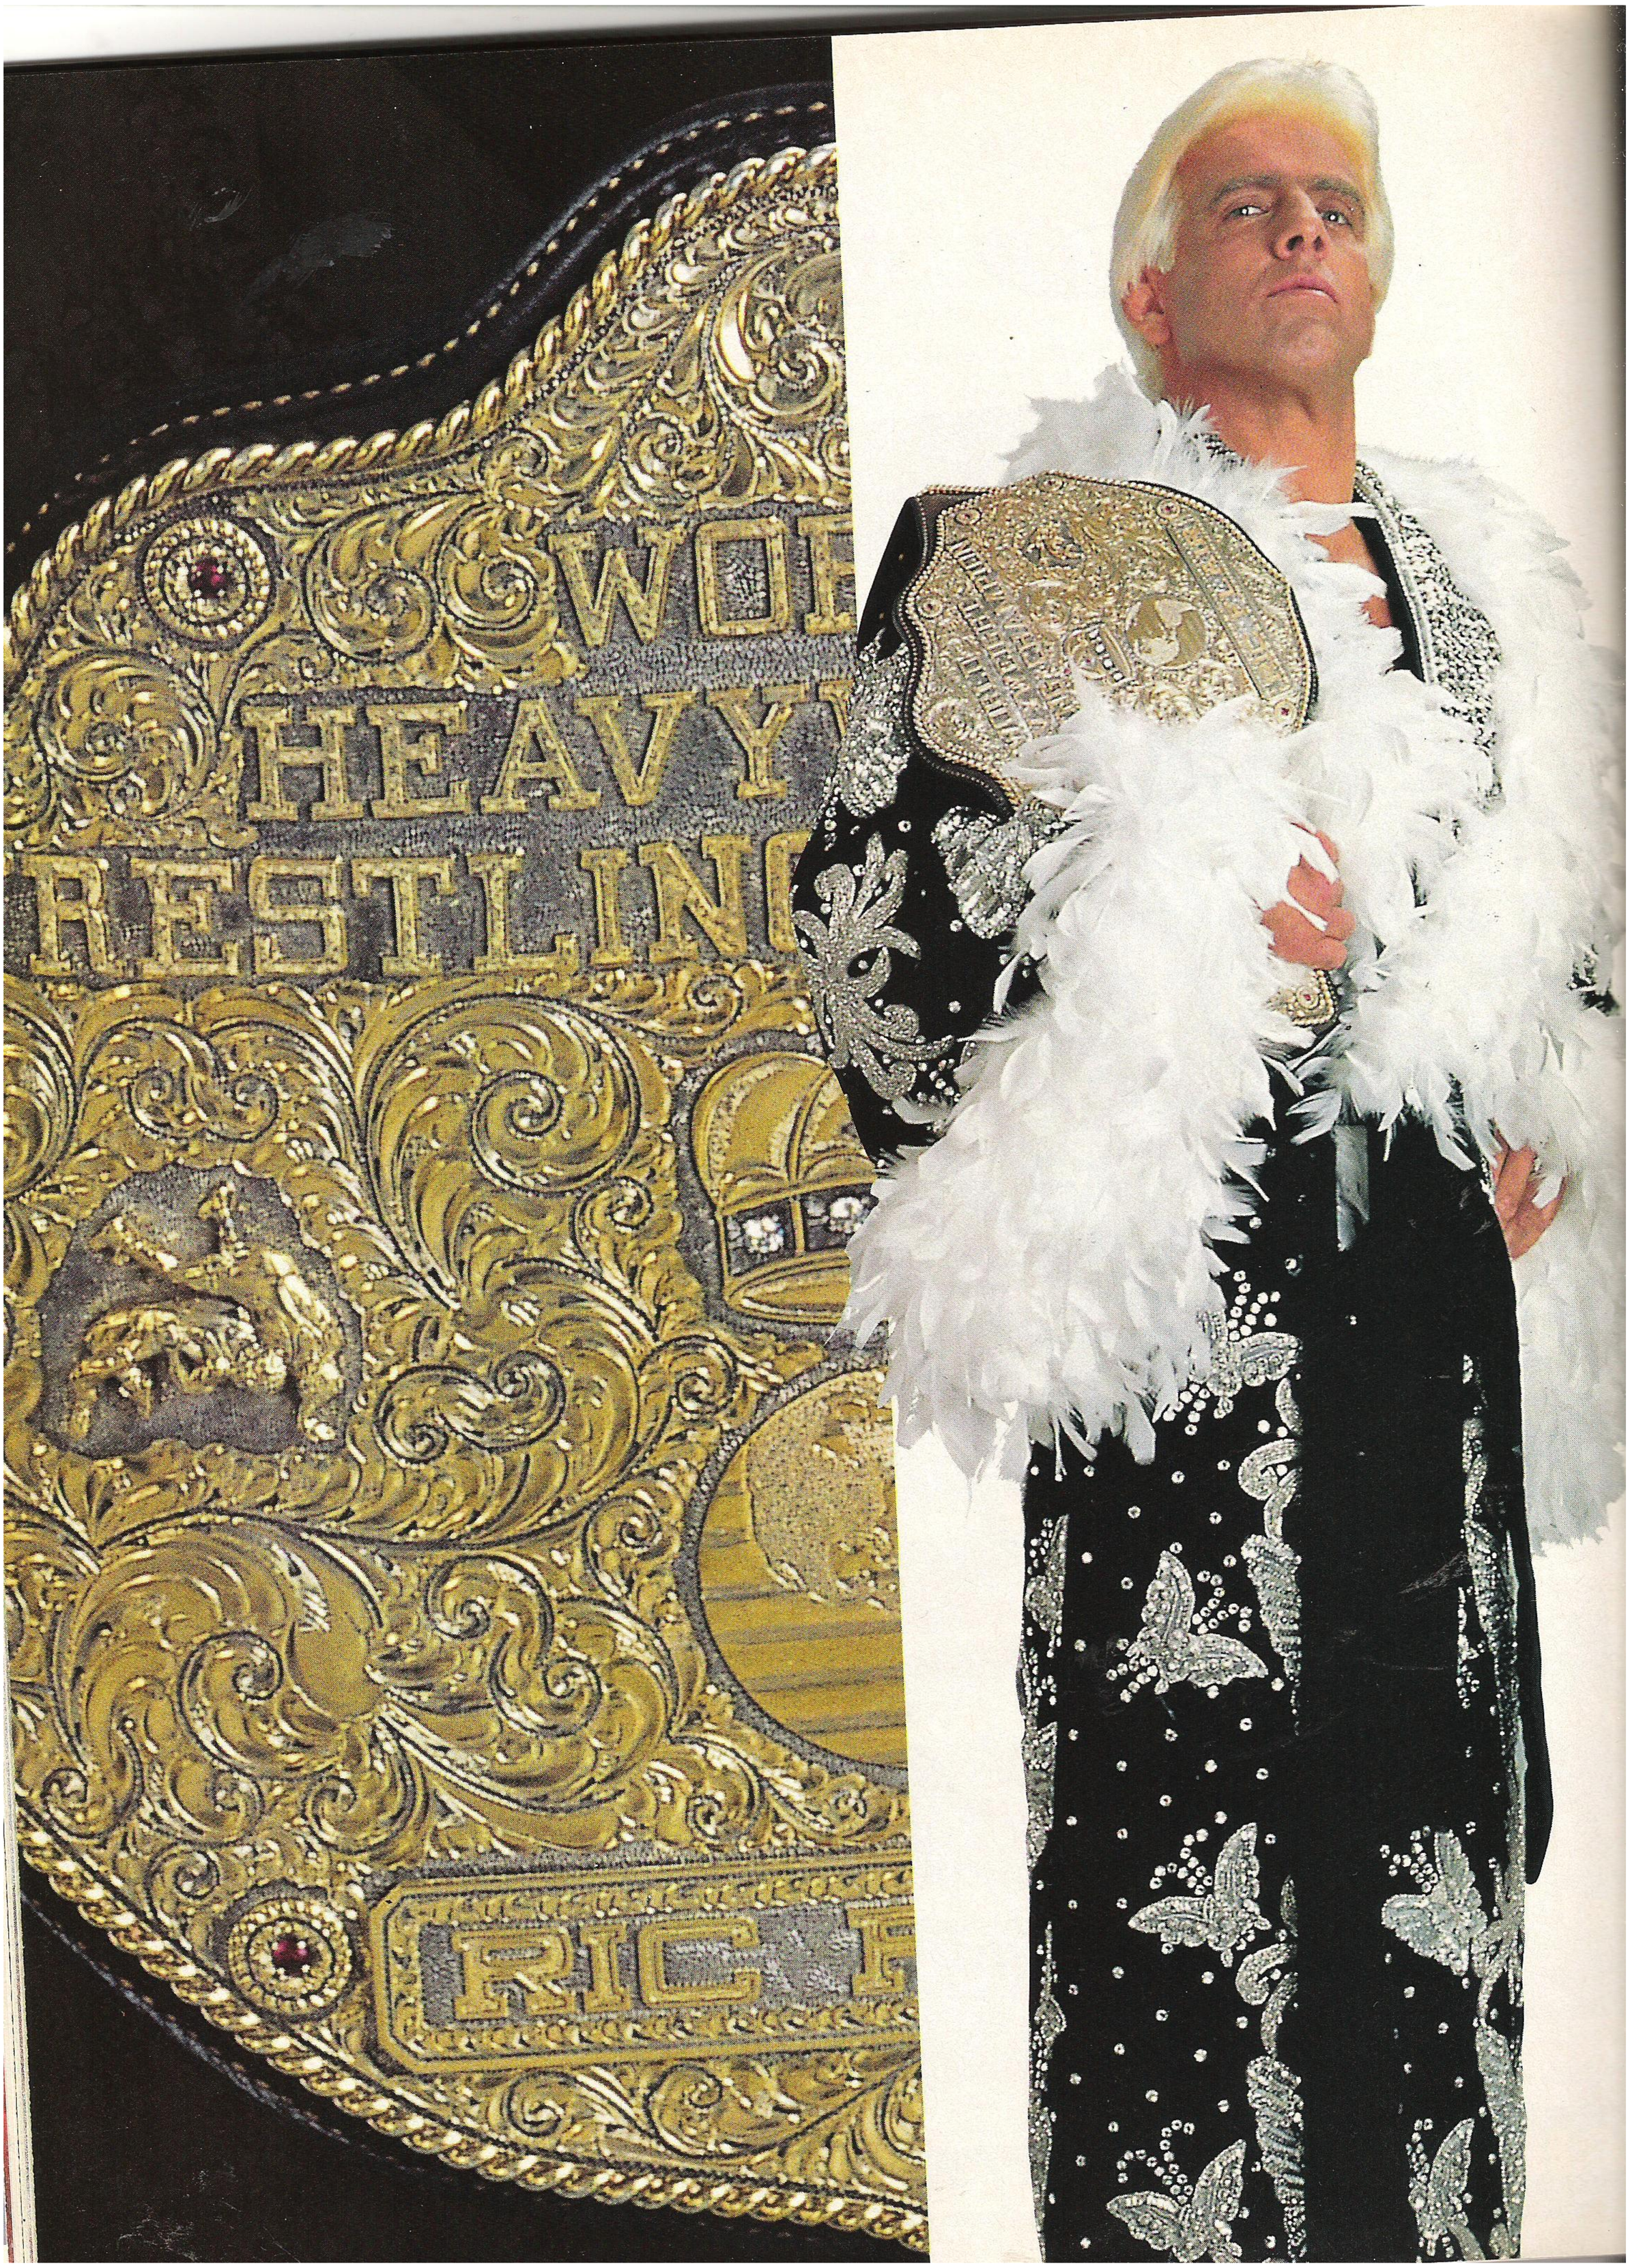

Recently, Sid showed his bravery when he came to the rescue of the Macho Man and Ms. Elizabeth Macho at their ill-fated wedding reception. As a result, Sid is currently out to get Jake "The Snake" Roberts in the ring.

Some words of advice for any of his prospective opponents: Don't confuse simplicity with stupidity. A man who learned to make the land produce its fruit has smarts. Never, never, never call Sid Justice a "plowboy." WF

RIC

I'm The Real World's Champion

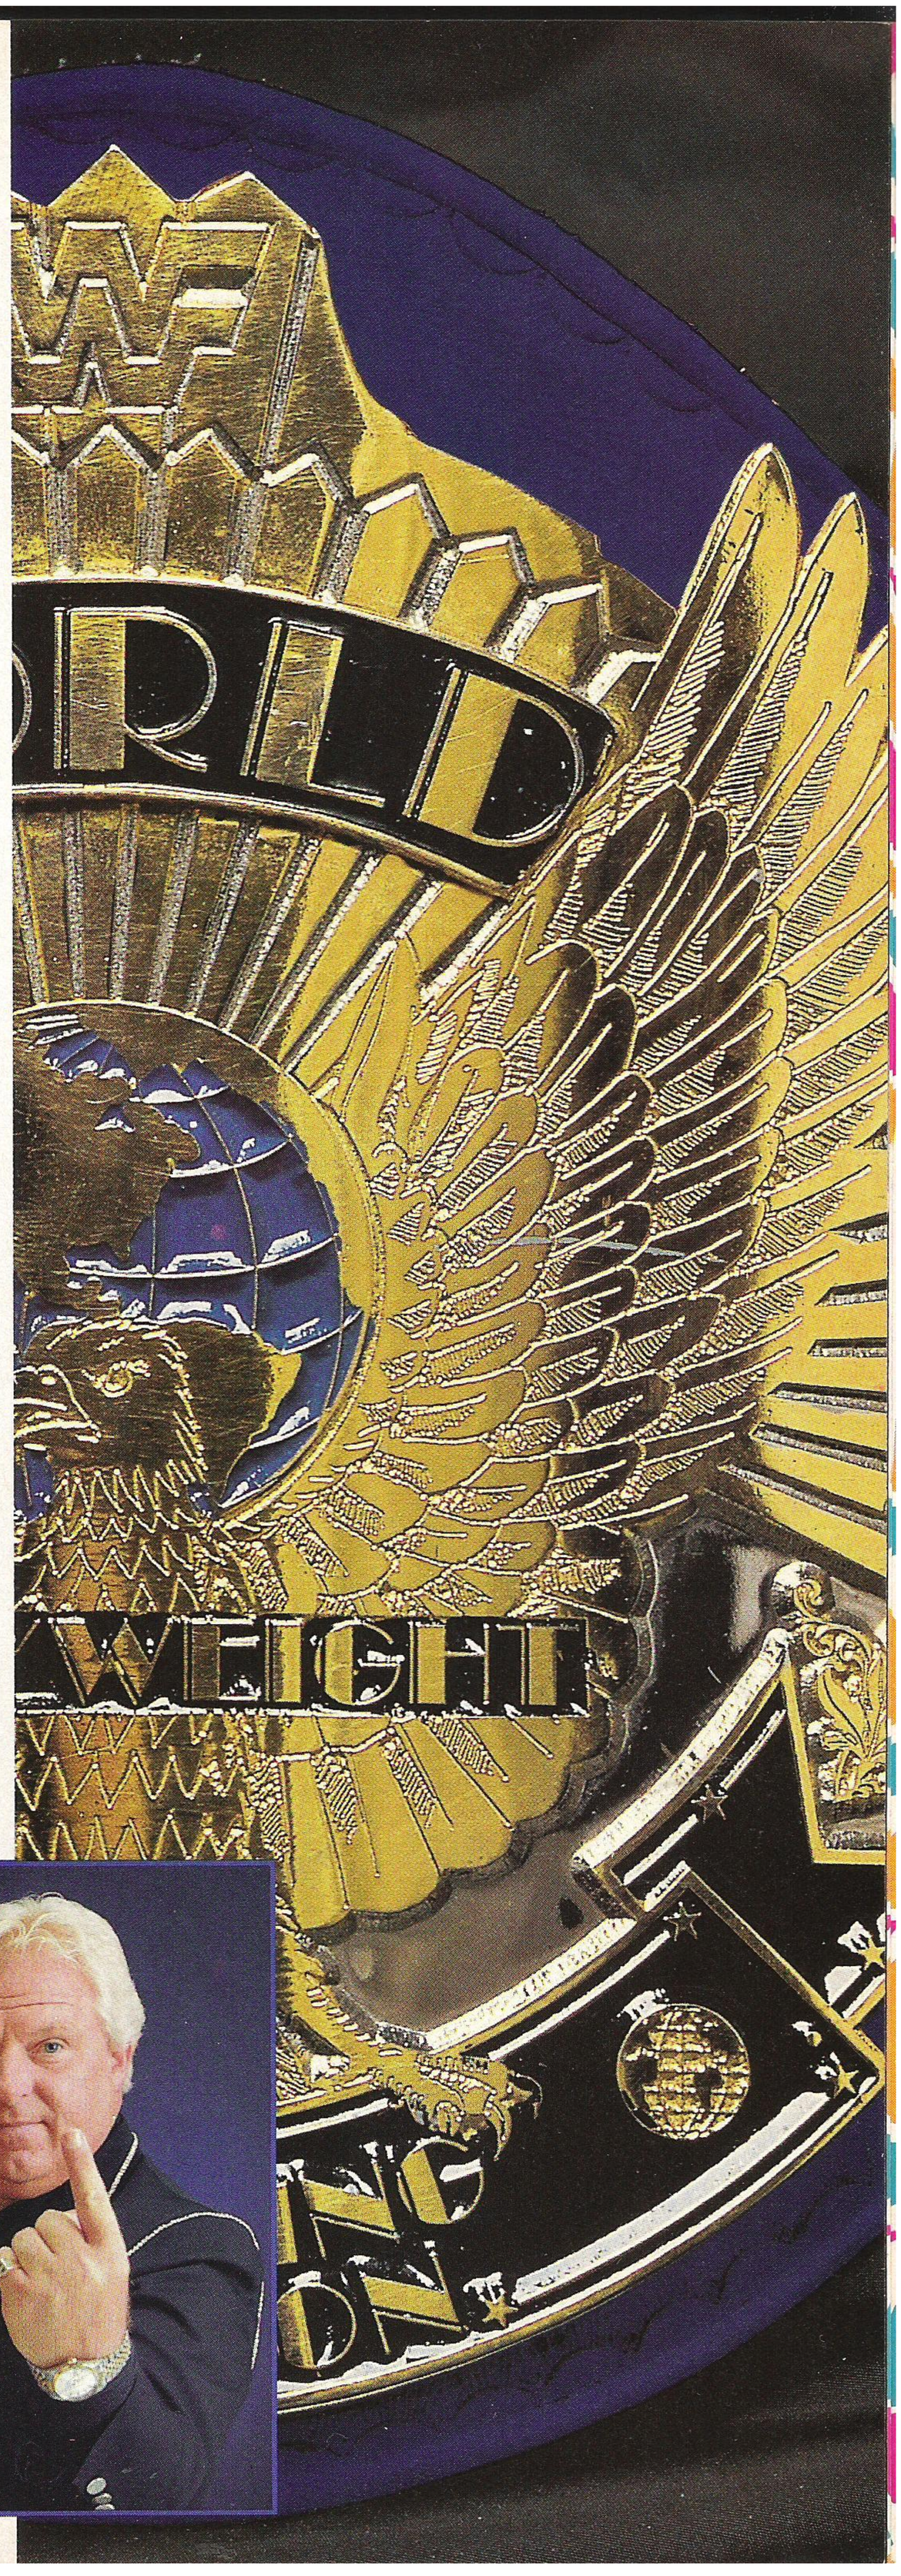

By Lou Gianfriddo

He's a man who has held major wrestling titles all over the world. He's a veteran wrestler who is a master of the intricacies of the squared circle. He's a man who claims that he is the real world's champion here in the World Wrestling Federation. He is "The Champ" Ric Flair, and since August he has been the subject of discussion throughout the WWF.

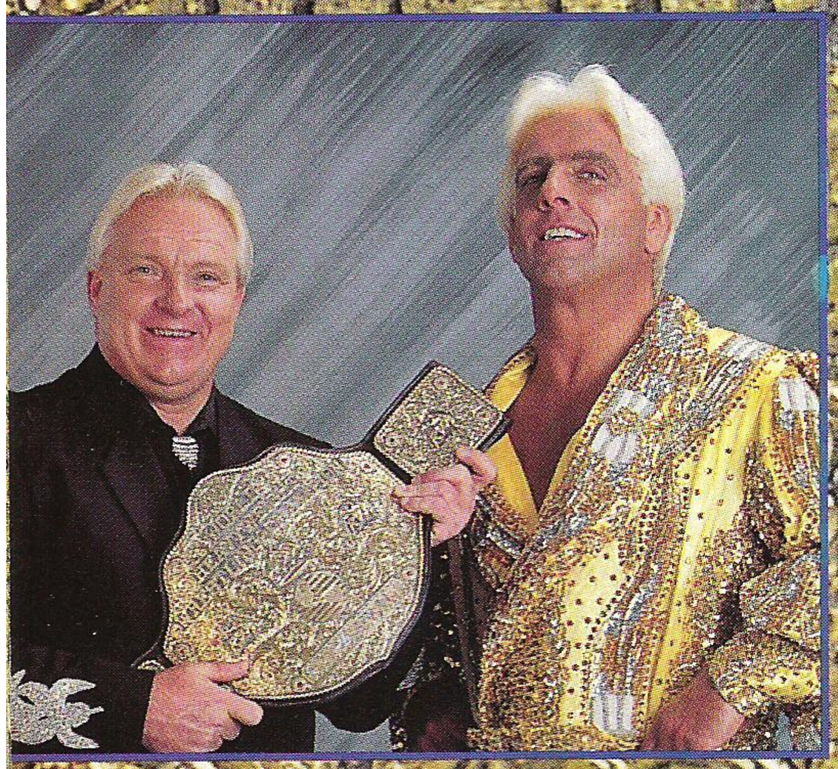

It started when Bobby Heenan began appearing on WWF Television with Flair's magnificent championship belt and told the world that Flair was the greatest wrestler of all time. Heenan, who had relinquished his career as a WWF manager in order to dedicate his time to the profession of broadcast journalism, also said that he would even consider advising Flair because, as Heenan sees it, "he [Ric Flair] is a man who deserves my managerial genius." Heenan extolled Flair's virtues at every turn.

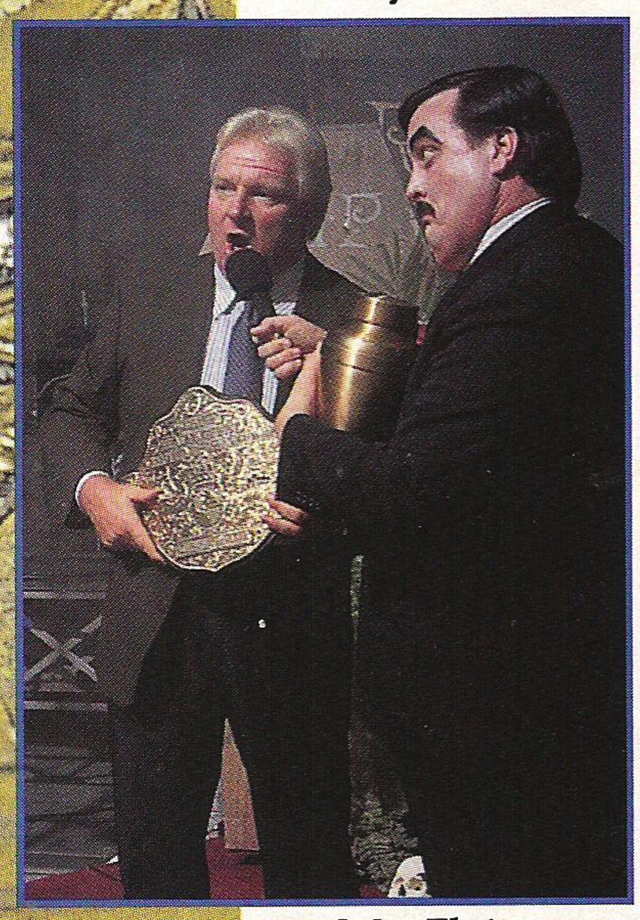

From there, Heenan went on to say that if Flair, who at the time had not signed a contract with the WWF, entered the World Wrestling Federation, he would have WWF Champion Hulk Hogan shaking in his boots. Now that Flair has joined the WWF's ranks, Heenan is certain that the Champ will dethrone the Hulkster in the very near future. Just listen to the Brain's comments.

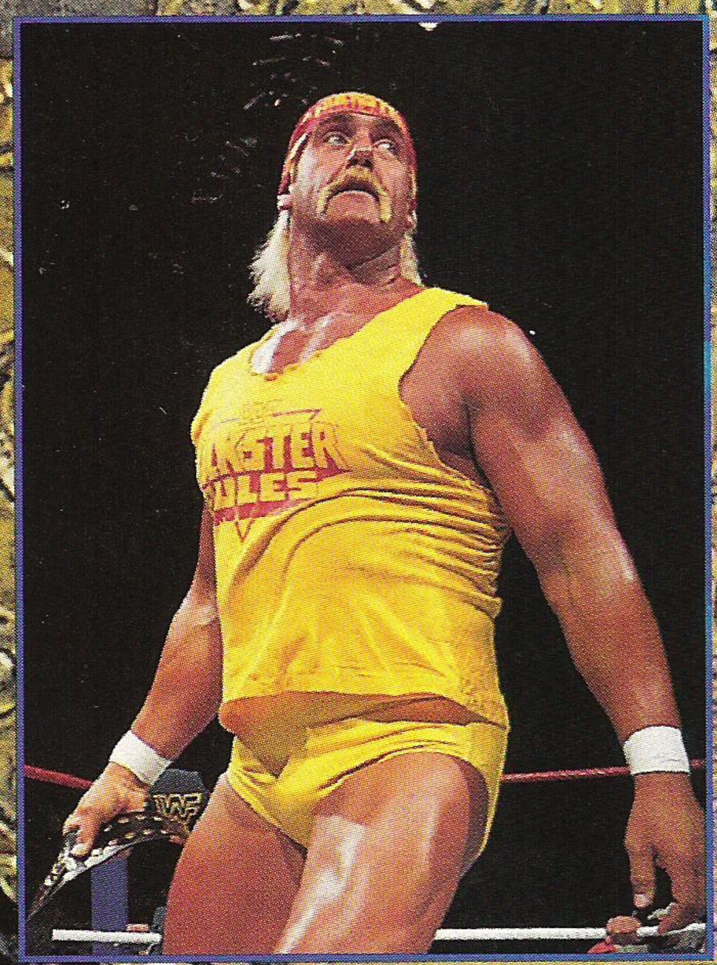

"Are you sleeping well these days, Hogan?" asked Heenan, as he held up the belt. "I bet you're not. You see, the real world's champion, Ric Flair, is in the World Wrestling Federation. That's right. It's time for you to put up or shut up, humanoid, because the real world's champion Ric Flair has been challenging you for years. Now you have no choice; you must wrestle him. It's time to meet your maker, dummy."

"Diamonds Are Forever, And So Is Ric Flair, Whooo!"

As is common knowledge today, Flair has appointed the Brain to be his official counselor, and the two have virtually been inseparable since they closed their business agreement. Just days before his WWF wrestling debut, for example, WWF Magazine had an opportunity to catch up with the Champ and the Brain near Flair's hometown of Charlotte, North Carolina. There, he and Heenan charted their course of action. They had the entire Coliseum videotape collection that features the Hulkster's greatest matches. They had obtained photocopies of his vital statistics and medical reports. When it comes to the Hulkster, say Flair and Heenan, they have it all at their fingertips.

"Hogan," Flair said, as he adjusted his imported silk tie, "the time is growing near, pal. Pretty soon, you and Ric Flair—the only world's champion, Ric Flair—will step in the ring and go man-to-man! The Brain and I have obtained all the information we need to know about you, pal, and believe me, it's gonna serve to haunt you.

"If you want the bottom line, I'll give you the bottom line," Flair continued, while his eyes blazed with intensity. "To be the man, you've got to beat the man, and, pal, I've been the man all my life! You know who Slic Ric is, and Slic Ric knows who you are. Let's do it, pal, you and me one-on-one in the middle of the ring. When I get you in there, Hogan, you'll realize that diamonds are forever, and so is the Champ Ric Flair! Whooo!"

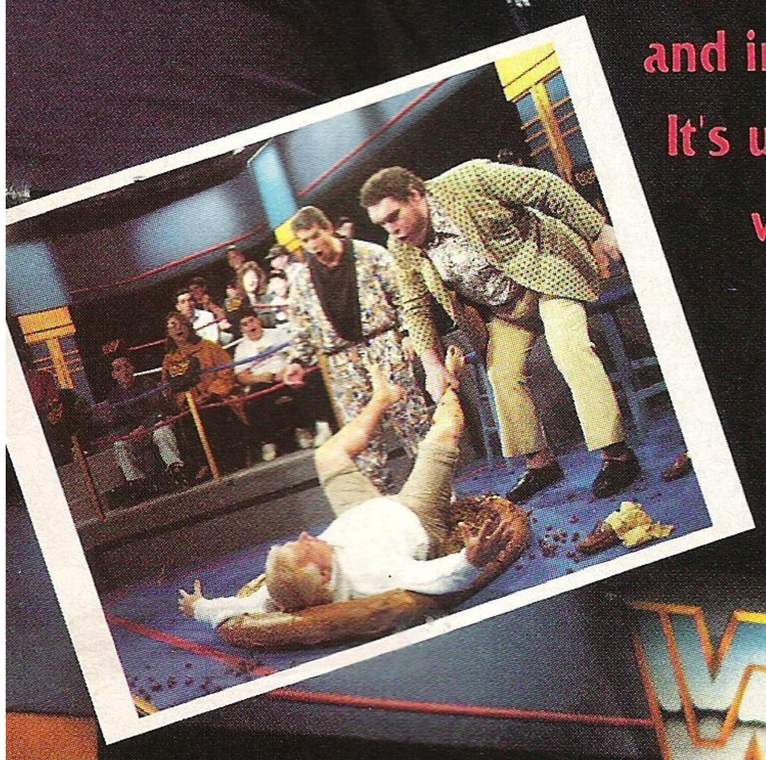

Although Flair may hold a championship belt, his title isn't recognized by WWF officials. "Anybody could come into the WWF with a title," says WWF President Jack Tunney. "It's true, Ric Flair has won major wrestling championships throughout the world. However, Mr. Flair must realize that he's in the World Wrestling Federation now, and we don't now and never will recognize his belt as a valid title belt for which other competitors can contend. It's just as simple as this, Mr. Flair: If you want to win any championship belt here in the WWF, then you'll have to get it the old-fashioned way. You'll have to earn it in the ring."

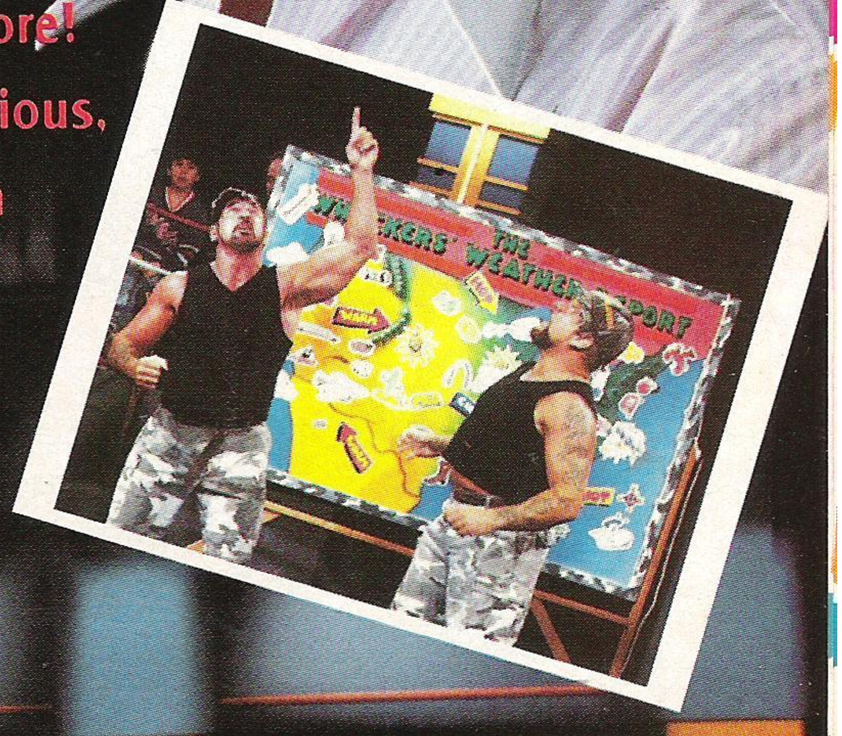

Flair says that he will do just that. When he gets his chance to meet the Hulkster in the ring, says Flair, he will prove to everyone that he is, in fact, the greatest champion the world has ever seen.

"It's just a matter of time, Hogan," vows the Champ. "It's just a matter of time before I show everybody that I can make a fool out of you in the ring." WF

Introducing The WWF's New Matador

Viva El Matador. That is the cry that resounds from the bull rings of Hispanic countries, such as Spain and Mexico. In these lands, the matador is a hero unparalleled, a man highly respected because of his courage in facing the fierce fighting bulls. Bullfighting is at the very heart of Hispanic tradition.

Some months ago, when WWF superstar Tito Santana was undergoing some self-searching about his life and his career, he pondered his roots in Old Mexico. It is not at all surprising that his thoughts turned to the life of the matador. Tito thought of the way the matador faces the challenge of the bullring, time after time looking danger in Training to become a matador begins with the basics. Before a matador enters the arena with a real bull, he practices his moves with trainers. Working with the cape requires agility, grace, split-second timing and exact precision. Fortunately, those are all traits that ring veteran Tito Santana possesses in spades. He quickly learned the intricacies of the sport of bullfighting.

the eye. He thought of the way the matador represents the dash and flair of Hispanic culture.

The more Tito thought, the more he became fascinated with the matador's lifestyle. He saw similarities between the way of the matador and his own career. Like the matador, Tito faces challenge after challenge in the ring, often against foes that seem as large as a fighting bull.

It occurred to Tito that the graceful, athletic tactics of the matador were similar to those in wrestling. Perhaps his wrestling style could benefit from learning more about the moves used by matadors.

So it was that Tito decided to return to Old Mexico and enroll in a school for matadors. Off he went to face the bulls.

PRIVATE EYE

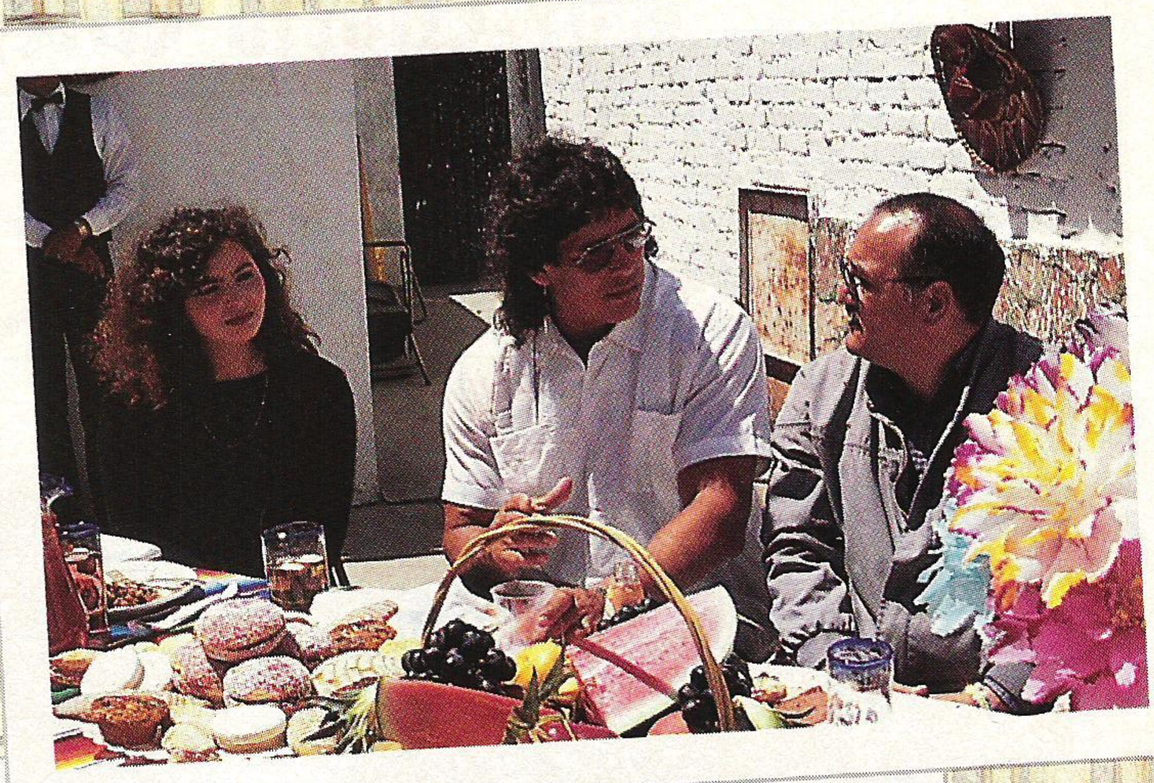

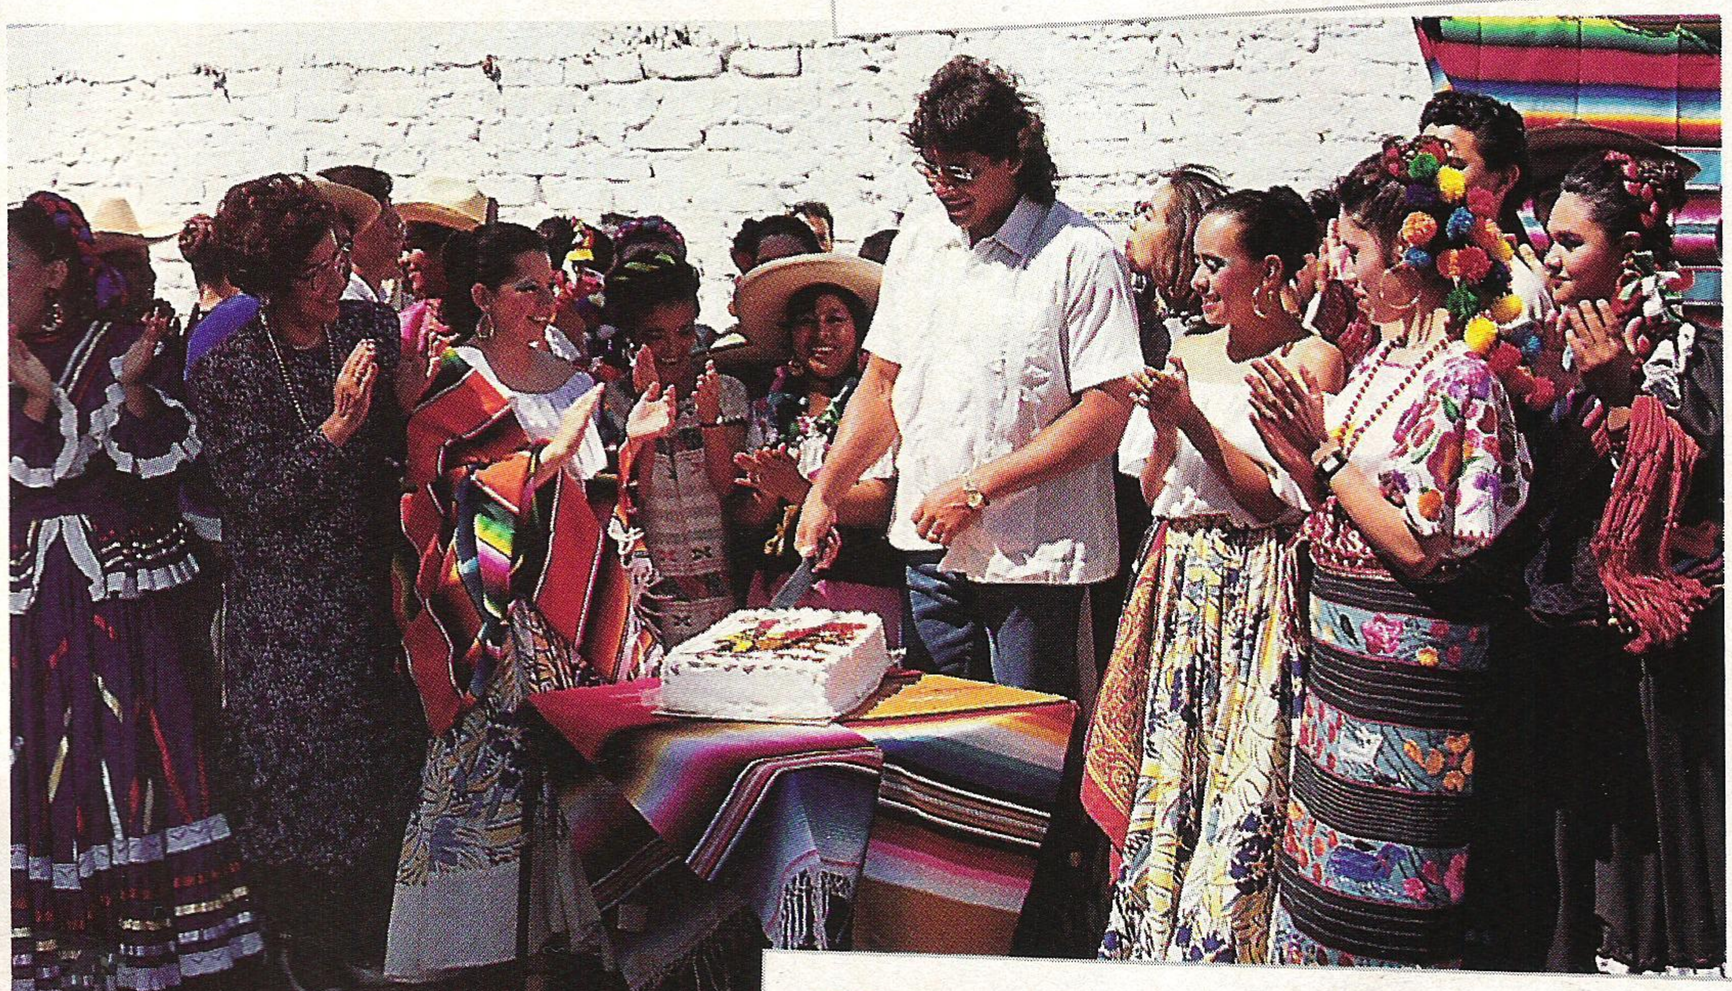

"It wasn't a hasty decision," says Tito. "I weighed the consequences carefully. I knew there was a risk of receiving an injury that might threaten my wrestling career. On the other hand, something inside me said I should go for the challenge. I felt a deep, compelling urge to link myself to the way of the matador.

Wearing the traditional garb of the matador, Tito takes on his first bull. For him, stepping into the arena and hearing the cheers of the fans was a moment filled with great excitement and personal pride. "I'll never forget it," says the WWF's matador. "It made me proud but also very humble. I'll carry the honor of the matador with me into the wrestling ring." After his debut, bullfight fans joyously celebrated with Tito.

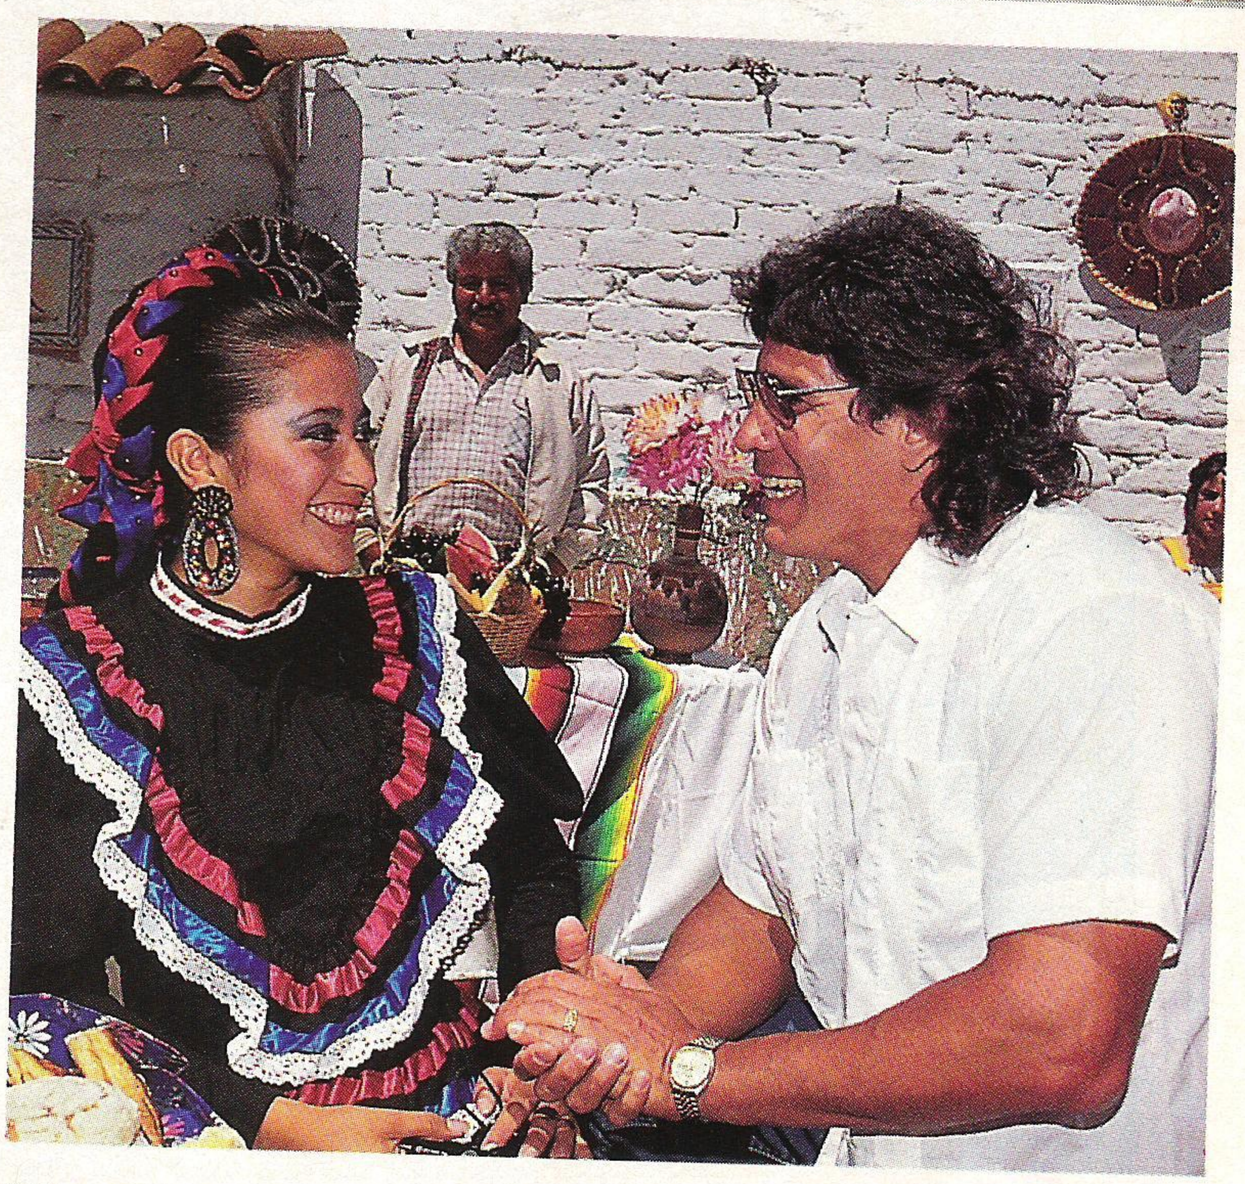

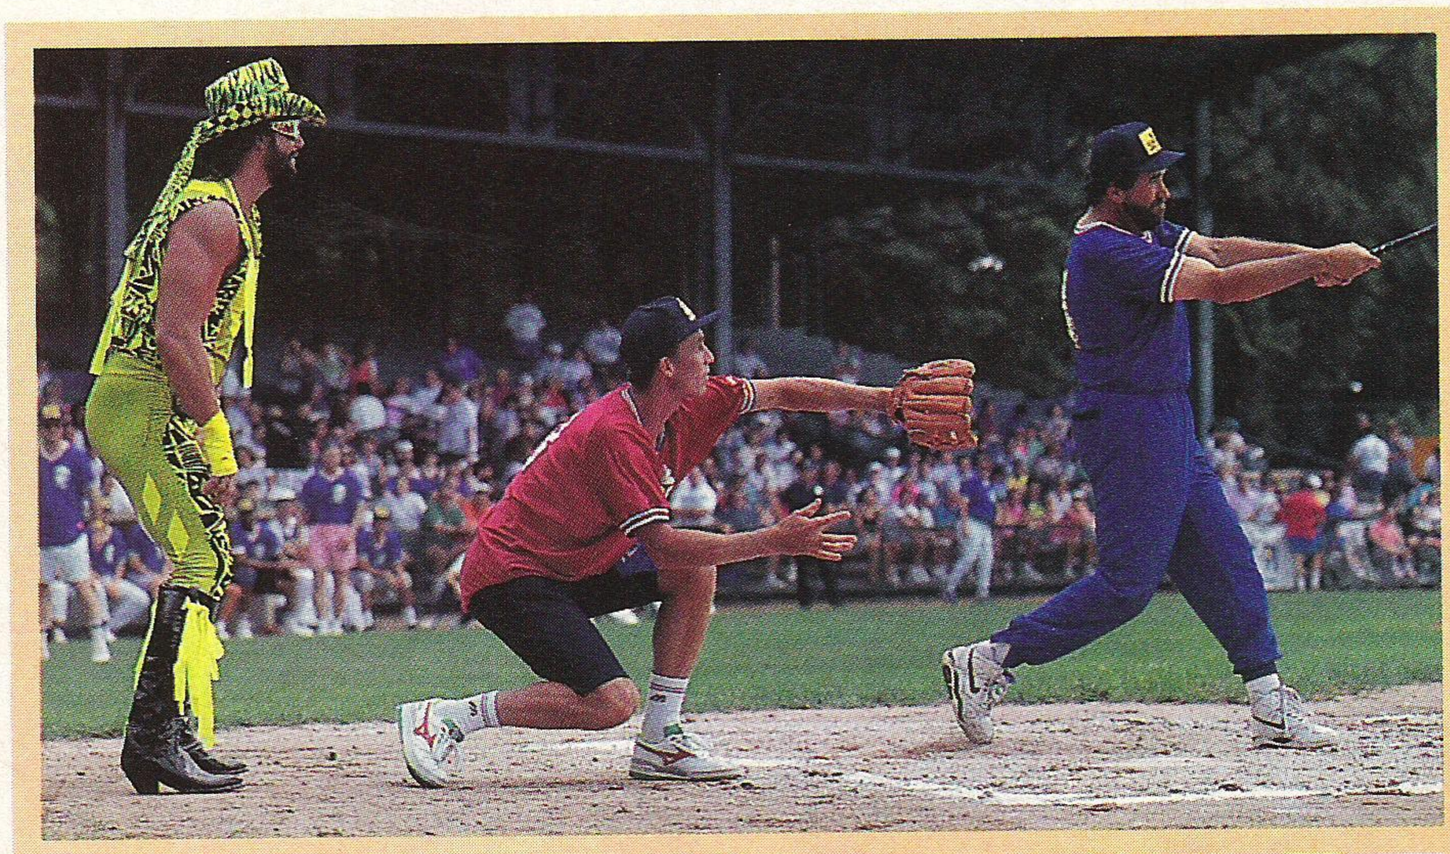

"It was tough, far tougher than I had imagined," continues Tito. "I'll admit I was nervous at first. I'll never forget facing my first bull. Yes, I was scared, but I overcame the butterflies. You learn to do that quickly in the WWF or you don't survive very long. It's the same in the bull ring."

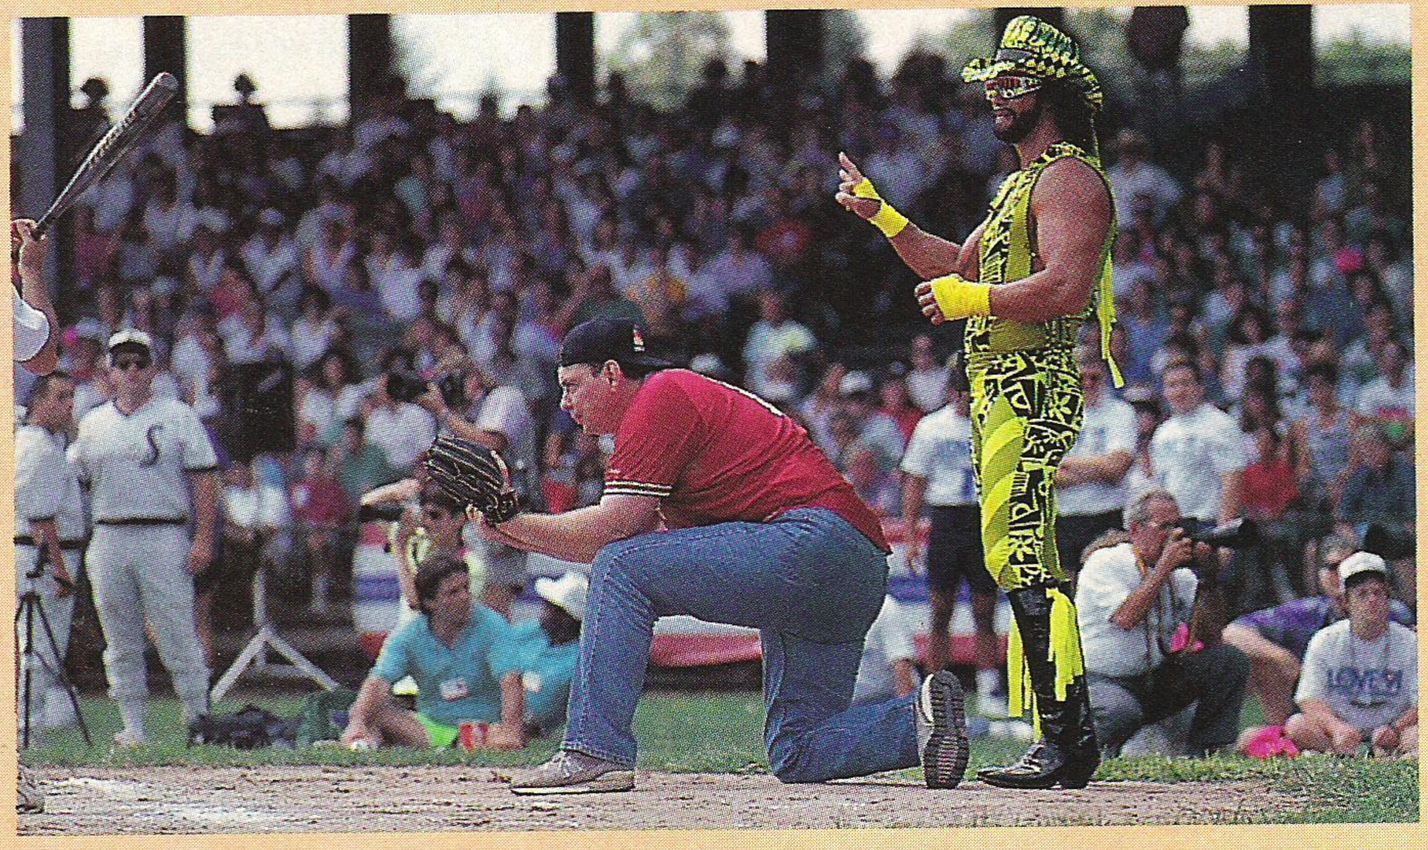

Under the hot Mexican sun, Tito learned the graceful passes a matador must master to escape the horns of a charging bull. He practiced the footwork, the twists, the evasive movements that are the matador's stock in trade.

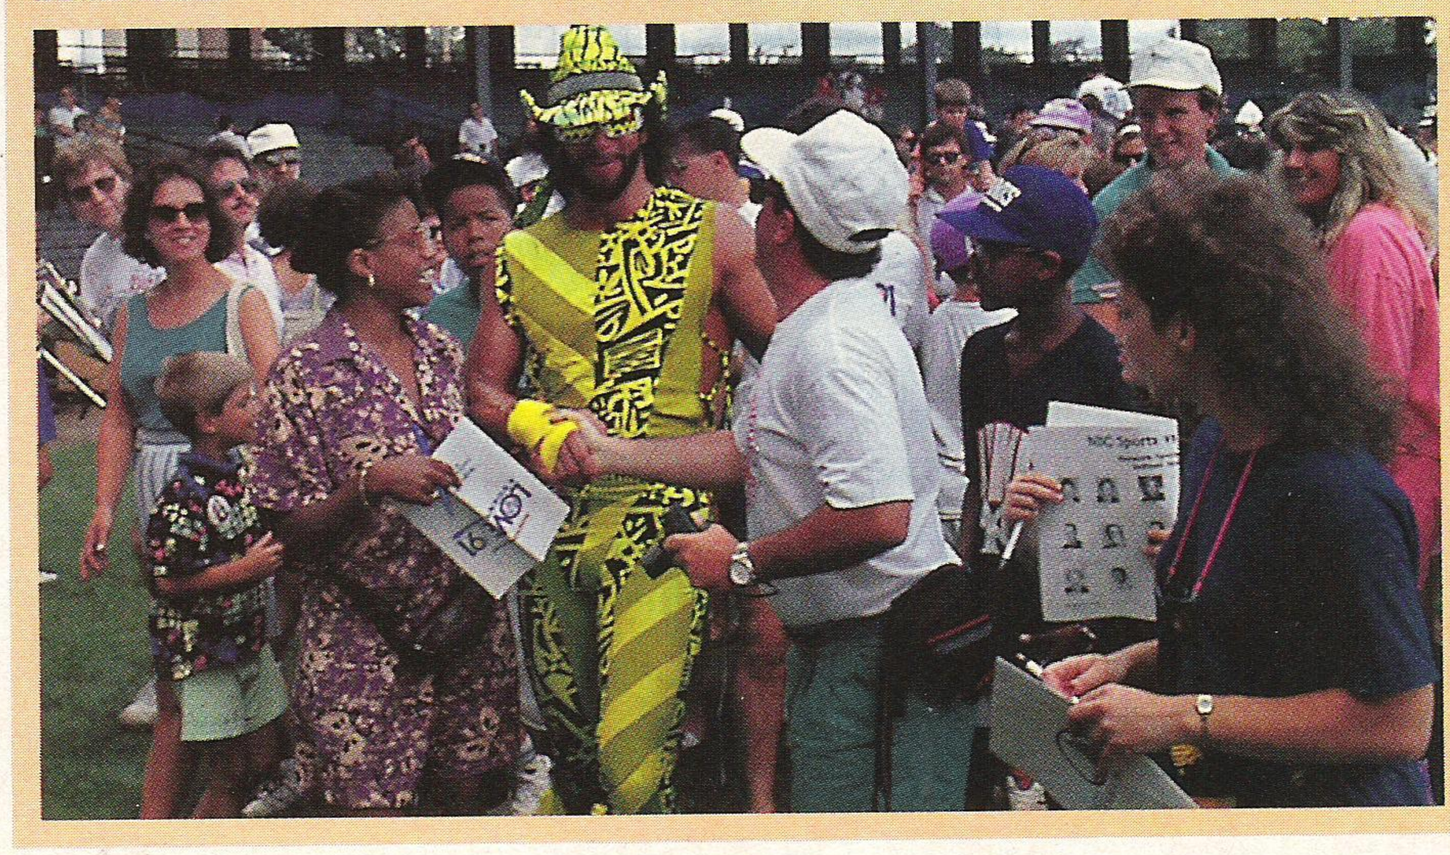

Now Tito has brought back what he has learned in the bullring to the WWF. We give you the Matador! WF

Vince And The Macho Man Help Play Ball!

The Volvo International Tennis Tournament, which is one of the most prestigious tournaments on the professional tennis circuit, was held in New Haven, Connecticut, this past August. In conjunction with the Volvo Tournament, NBC Sports battled CBS Sports in a charity softball game called No Love Lost Celebrity Softball Showdown to help raise funds for the Special Olympics. WWF commentators Vince McMahon and Macho Man Randy Savage, who appear weekly on WWF Superstars of Wrestling, were on hand.

Vince, along with popular radio jock Don Imus, called the action, while the Macho Man called balls and strikes from behind the plate. The game had many highlights, especially when tennis star Ivan Lendl forehanded a home run over the right field fence.

When the dust cleared, NBC defeated CBS 11-5. However, as the Macho Man later told Lowdown, everybody who contributed time and effort to the game was a winner. "Yes, sir," the Macho Man said, "No Love Lost '91, and the WWF was there! Everybody felt good and, yeaa, the Macho Man and Vince McMahon felt good because what we did will help other athletes who participate in the Special Olympics! Oh, yeah!"

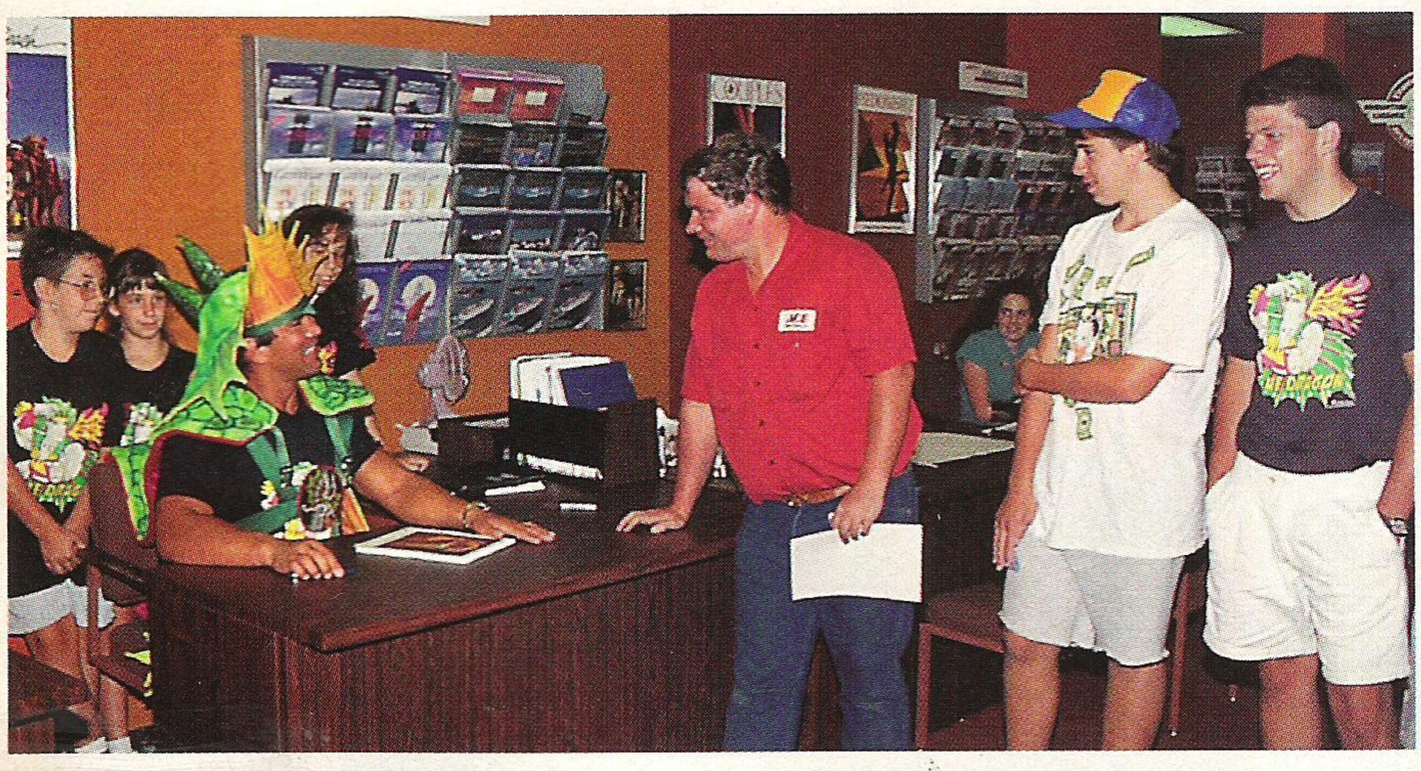

Macho Man and Vince McMahon participated in a charity softball game in conjunction with the Volvo International Tennis Tournament.

In Connecticut, the Dragon raised funds for the Children's Diabetes Association.

The Dragon

The Dragon blazed into Danbury, Connecticut, where he donated his time to a most worthy cause. He stopped by the Danbury Fair Mall to help raise money for the Children's Diabetes Association. The Dragon, so he tells Lowdown, is a very big supporter of the Children's Diabetes Association as well as other charitable organizations the world over. "It warms my heart to know that my presence can benefit those little Dragons who aren't as lucky as I am," says the Dragon.

A Tornado Strikes Westboro, Massachusetts!

The town of Westboro, Massachusetts, was recently struck by a tornado—a Texas Tornado, that is—when the former Intercontinental Champion made an appearance at Duddi Ford. Hundreds of people turned out to meet and greet this muscular superstar, and according to the Tornado, that's something he really enjoys.

"I like to meet my fans," the Tornado informed Lowdown. "To me, my fans are like my second family." WF

VIEWPOINT

By The Dragon

A man has come into the World Wrestling Federation. He calls himself Skinner. From what I have heard, he has a trophy case filled with reptile skins. Those skins have come from caimans; they have come from alligators; they have come from many other forms of wildlife.

Now, Skinner, gaze upon this reptile. Look at my skin. Look at my scales glisten in the light. I ask you the question: Do you want my skin? Do you want to place the Dragon's skin alongside the others in your trophy case? Do you want to take your blades and traps to me? If you do, Skinner, then you should expect this from the fire-breathing Dragon.

This foe you will face does not go down to those who take skins from the reptile family. I will attack you from all four corners of the ring and breathe my fire right down the center of your back. You will feel my heat, Skinner! I will give you no rest. I will be fighting you for one reason, and that's to defend the reptiles of the earth—the same reptiles that you trap—the reptiles that you mercilessly skin alive.

I will trap you in the same way that you have trapped countless caimans in the Florida Everglades; I will torture you in the same way that you have tortured many alligators and serpents of the swamp. I will try to destroy you, Skinner. And not even you—armed with all of your skinning knives—can stop the Dragon.

Soon, Skinner, you will come to terms with the dangers of fire. You will come to terms with the feeling of pain. I'll promise you this: When you and I face off within the confines of the ring, Skinner, your skin will be mine... WF

CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Sensational Sherri, manager of the Million Dollar Man, recently footed the bill and took Lord Alfred Hayes and the Brooklyn Brawler out to dinner. Prior to the hors d'oeuvres, Sherri and the Brawler gagged Alfred to prevent him from disrupting their casual conversation that centered around world finance and back-alley gang fights.
